The next Session will begin on September 15, 1882.

The object of this Institution is to furnish an advanced course of instruction in the various branches of a liberal education. The curriculum of study extends over two years; the work of each session being complete in itself. It comprises English, including Modern History and Literature, Mathematics, English Grammar, and Logic; Classics, including Latin, Ancient History, and Classical Literature; Modern Languages, Physical Science, and the Fine Arts. Special preminence is given to the study of History and Literature, especially to English History and Literature; the aim being to promote systematic habits of study and an increasing desire of knowledge, rather than to crowd the mind with an ill-digested stock of information—development of the intellectual powers and a hearty sympathy for the higher pursuits of literature, art, and science.
