

Part B – The Machinery of Government

The Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade advises the government on foreign issues. And it administers and co-ordinates Canada's foreign policy. But how is that policy created?

In the Canadian system there are three elements of government: legislative, executive and judicial. Those powers correspond to: Parliament; the Prime Minister and Cabinet (in the name of the Crown); and the courts.

Parliament

Cabinet

Courts