
CONCLUSION

Nothing more of social importance remains to be noted during the stay of the distinguished visitors in Quebec. A cordial invitation was extended to them to remain over for the ceremony and festivities attending the installation of the new Lieut.-Governor ; but all of them, except the Attorney General of Nova Scotia, Hon. Mr. Longley, found themselves reluctantly compelled to decline it owing to want of time, and the same remarks apply to the equally pressing invitation communicated to them, through Hon. J. McShane, from the citizens of Montreal to a banquet which it was proposed to give in that city in their honor.
