

By interpreting the first of Genesis along the reasonable lines herein, we find that Revelation and Science are quite agreed, and having found "peace" I venture to offer to others a brief review of my long research. G. A. A.

"You have done some thinking. I congratulate you."

—Dr. Leland, Author, Seabreeze, Fla.

"Your general style and diction is excellent. The acrostic is grand."

—Rev. R. J. Currie, B. A., Woodslee, Ont.

Revelation and Science at Peace!

"In th beginning God created the heaven and the earth. And the earth was without form and void." (Certainly, the earth was without spherical "form" and also "void" of any animated life). "And darkness was upon the face of the deep." ("Darkness was upon the "earths' sedimental surface" deep "below the swirling clouds of steam and moistures: which moistures were called "the waters").

"And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters." ("Moved upon the face of" the higher cloud regions where was visible, star and other light, in great beauty.

There is a hint here that the "Spirit of God" moving upon the "face of the waters," would then fructify the world). "And God said: Let there be light." (Since light and