London. The title-page of his translation of Beza's Le Sacrifice d'Abraham informs us that it was "Finished at Pouules Belchamp in Essex, the xi. of August, 1575." Warton thinks that he contributed some verses to the entertainment at Kenilworth in that year, but he bases this opinion only on the strength of Gascoigne's statement that certain verses were written by "Master Goldingham,"—a not uncommon name at that time. On January 6, 1576, Golding was living at Clare in Suffolk.

Between 1576 and 1585 Golding must have spent a great part of his time in Essex, for he was becoming a great landed proprietor chiefly owing to the death of his brothers Henry Morant's Essex furnishes us with detailed and George. information regarding Golding's life in this capacity. His brother Henry had become possessed of the manor of East Thorp, part of which he had purchased from Robert Waldgrave on May 6, 1564, and the remainder, together with the advowson of the church, from John Bacon on October 7, 1576 (Lett. pat. 6, 12 Eliz.). "He dyed 6 Decemb, 1576, seized not only of his maner, but also of Oldholt tenement, and several lands and tenements in Birch and Messing. Arthur his brother and next heir, then aged 40 succeeded him (Inquis. 19 Eliz. Feb. 7)." Golding seems to have intended to dispose of this property almost immediately: " On the 20th of Novemb. (1577?) he procured a license to alienate this whole estate to Richard Atkins, Gent. and Elianore his wife (Book of Alienat.)" As we shall see however, he was still possessed of East Thorp in 1585. Other lands inherited from this same brother he kept in his possession till 1591: "Besides which [Little Birch and East Thorp] he [Henry Golding] had in this parish Cocks woods; Cocks lands, and Oldholt tenement; a messuage called Moothes containing 50 acres; a tenement and two crofts called Wasselings; and a moiety of messuages and lands called Garlands and Ives crofts, alias Derby lands.
