

as this? "Thou wouldst not sent me if thou hadst not found me!" At that very moment, thanks to the lucidity of mind which accompanies the scholar into all crises, Adrien Sixte recalled this admirable sentence of Pascal in his "Mystérie de Jésus," and when the mother arose from her knees the philosopher was also weeping.

THE END.