

LOOKING BACK OVER THE SESSION

Some of the Votes and Legislation at Ottawa

Final Action on Liquor Importation into British Columbia—Some Critical Situations—Two Resolutions Not Dealt With.

(Canadian Press) Ottawa, June 28.—The first session of the 14th parliament of Canada which closed this morning was marked by the presence of the Progressives as an influential party and the emergence of a fourth, or labor, group. The Progressives exercised a controlling influence in many situations during the session, while the two labor members were active in setting forth their point of view on most of the items that arose.

The fact that the Progressives are predominantly western in membership, coupled with other circumstances in the national situation, combined to give western questions unusual prominence. The demand for the wheat board is the first big western issue to make its felt, and while the western members did not get all they asked for, they did get a chance to try out their remedy within the limits of the constitution.

The railway rate question, wrapped up as it was with the Crew's Knot Pass agreement, gave the session a critical wind-up and on this issue there was a compromise which gave the great bulk of its basic industry while refusing other rate reductions to the railway commission.

Legislation. The Senate asserted its right to criticize by killing a bill to withdraw federal control from the Lake of the Woods, while in the case of the Canada Temperance Act, the commonsense had to surrender the section which gave British Columbia authority to prevent the private importation of liquor.

There were several critical situations during the session. On the Nova Scotia resolution to prohibit ministers of the crown from holding directorships in certain corporations, the government had support of the Conservatives, the majority by the union of Liberals and official opposition being large.

On a division early in May in connection with the Railway question the government majority was revised was fifteen, there being a considerable number of absentees among both the opposition parties.

On the budget the ministry had a majority of eighteen, nine Progressives voting with the Liberals, while the rest of the opposition united in the negative. Owing to criticism within the Liberal ranks there was a crisis over the militia and naval service estimates, the minister meeting the criticism by large cuts in the vote for these departments.

Many other questions were prominent in the course of the session. The government announced further details on the national railway and government merchant marine, but did not carry out the expected re-organization of the management. The returned soldier problem was again carefully considered in a special committee and some further improvements made in the legislation on this subject.

The period for the sale of oil was extended again. The Nova Scotia case, which had been disposed of by a new board that did not intend to proceed at present with the St. Lawrence waterway project. Further restrictions on liquor promotion were pronounced. The lash was added as a penalty for the sale of drugs to miners. The disarmament treaty and amendments to the covenant of the League of Nations were adopted.

Longer Than Expected. The session lasted a month longer than as first anticipated, but the end left in amount of business till high on the order paper. There was no contribution bill introduced, but one was promised for next session. Personal representation had a brief showing but got buried in the list of adjourned debates. An amendment to the constitution of former enemies was not urged after a strong protest had been made against it by the leader of the opposition. Two bills fathered by J. S. Woodsworth, Labor member for Winnipeg Centre, which grew out of the legislative strike got consideration in special committee but were left behind in the wind-up. A resolution annulling the West was never called and similar neglect was meted out to a proposal by Wm. Irvine, Labor, Calgary East, that the defeat of a government measure should not necessarily mean the defeat of the government.

MEPARTLAND AGAIN IS HEAD OF TYPOS Indianapolis, June 28.—John McPartland of New York was re-elected president of the International Typographical Union by a majority of 4,633 over Walter W. Barrett of Chicago, his opponent, according to voting results announced yesterday. George H. Howard, Winnipeg, was elected delegate to the trades and labor congress of Canada.

Graduation of Kindergarten Teachers

The great value of work done by kindergartens was given a vivid presentation in word and in practical demonstration yesterday afternoon at the graduation exercises of the kindergarten-training class in the G. W. Y. A. rooms. The teacher of the class, Mrs. A. F. Robinson, presided and there was a large audience. Four pupils received graduation certificates, the Misses Eleanor Cline, Elsie Macdonald, Elizabeth Sturges and Doris Woodrow, and six post-graduate certificates were presented—those receiving them being Misses Florence Kierstead, Edna Catwell, Edith Stephens, Ruth Manley, Louise Estey and Winifred Ross.

Miss Doris Woodrow, in an interesting and clever paper, explained Froebel's principles, giving her hearers a real understanding and appreciation of the aims and ideals of the founder of modern methods of kindergarten work and disabusing their minds of many common misconceptions of kindergarten methods. Miss E. Estey, in a well written paper on story-telling, pointed out the incalculable influence of story-telling on children and then proved the effect of a story well told by telling her audience the story of the ugly duckling. Miss Audrey Hunter contributed two pleasing solos and Miss Eleanor Cline, in her paper on nature study, suggested the almost limitless possibilities of this teaching for kindergarten work and delighted her audience by telling the story of the little green caterpillar. Mrs. Robinson told of the changes in the kindergarten work which have been made in the last few years and said that more would probably be made in the future. Rev. Fred MacAskillian presented the certificates to the graduates and post-graduates. He hoped, he said, to some day see the kindergarten as a recognized part of the public school system. Miss Jessie Lawrence addressed the graduates and congratulated them on the work they had chosen to follow. A bouquet of roses was presented to the graduates by the graduates as a mark of their appreciation. Miss F. Kierstead and Miss Louise Estey gave an enjoyable piano duet.

A PLATFORM FOR BETTER BUSINESS

Adopted at Conference of Associated Advertising Clubs of the World—What They Recommend.

The educational department of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World held a conference at Milwaukee, Wis., June 26-27, 1922. The conference was held in the Chamber of Commerce, Milwaukee, Wis., and was presided over by the president of the Chamber of Commerce, Milwaukee, Wis., Mr. J. A. Hall, educational director, writes: "Short addresses were made by representatives of all the above interests, telling what their organizations were doing to aid business and making suggestions for a platform, that all these forces could concentrate on for the next twelve months, in an effort to further assist business up to the sound prosperity which all agreed was on the way."

"In the first place, it was deemed essential by everyone, it was agreed that this was a most important conference that the foundation of any prosperity that may be coming, must be laid absolutely on truth and honesty in all departments of merchandising. It was reported from all sides that there had been a very great tendency to get away from truth in advertising, in a mistaken effort to force business. It was agreed that this was a most foolish and disastrous tendency, and one that must be corrected before business could attempt to reach normalcy. But truth in advertising is not enough. It must be backed up by honest merchandising in all departments of business. Salespeople must be instructed to tell the truth about the merchandise that they offer, to eliminate exaggeration, to make performances out of promises, and to, at all times, consider the customers' viewpoint in order that the greatest possible service may be rendered."

"It was the belief of the conference that a further development of the principles of the forefathers of this country, in business, would be a great aid in promoting better business. They further believed that the growth must give way to the optimistic, and that in all business transactions, there must be a spirit of confidence and cheerfulness."

"One speaker told of a large department store which had concentrated on greater courtesy on the part of their salespeople, over an extended period, with a net result of an increase of over 20 per cent in business. Therefore, it was urged that the spirit of courtesy be promoted in all business transactions."

"A general community spirit was urged in that the building of the community was the corner-stone of prosperity, and was suggested that all forces use every possible means to encourage community development and a realization on the part of retailers that whatever they may do to help the other fellow, will help themselves individually, and that they truly help themselves when they help their neighbors."

"It was further suggested, and this is perhaps one of the most important steps the entire conference, that a national council of retailers be organized by this department. This council would be made up of representative leaders in retailing in each community, who would act in an advisory capacity to all forces working for Better Business. They would, in co-operation with the educational department of the A. A. C. of W., have a thorough analysis made of their community, thus getting a knowledge of the buying power, and the best way to help them in disposing of their wares. This is a most important move, and in every way this new organization would act as the greatest body of counselors for business, in every community, intelligent, sound, progressive lines."

"The writer plans to secure the presence of these Councils of Retailers in the very near future, and probably call a conference of the entire number during the few months to come."

"Every trade association and Chamber of Commerce was urged to appoint a better business committee, for the purpose of securing better advertising in their industry or community, leading to better business, and the full co-operation of the educational department of the A. A. C. of W. was pledged in this respect. This is a most important move, for better business, and it is hoped that each association will immediately take steps for the appointment of such a committee to work with the educational department of the A. A. C. of W. It was announced that the Music Industries Chamber of Commerce had already started this work by offering a trophy for the best advertising used by its members during the coming year, and that a committee of leading advertising and marketing experts would be appointed by the A. A. C. of W., to co-operate with a like committee from the Music Industries, to judge this contest."

"It was urged that all organizations and interests represented at the conference, and working for the improvement of conditions in their particular line, hold frequent meetings such as was held at Milwaukee, and that they all work together through the educational department of the A. A. C. of W. toward co-ordination of effort in all lines."

New York, June 28.—(By Canadian Press) Hereford, Ireland (Herald) prints an editorial congratulating the people of Southern Ireland on the wisdom they displayed in supporting the treaty with Great Britain in the recent elections. The old island seemed to be in a mental confusion."
