Sir Wilfrid Laurier assured the manufacturers that Canada's interests would not be sacrificed at Washington. He expressed the view held by very many people that a measure of reciprocity may be secured without any such sacrifice.

But o'er the desert's quivering lines He sees the city from afar. By day a polished pearl it shines, By night it glitters like a star. He doth not feel his bleeding feet, And when his nightly tent is spread, The pavement of the golden street Re-echoes to his dreaming tread.

But the Standard contends that good men will not offer as candidates. There are two answers to this statement. One is of the Department of Railways and Canals two answers to this statement. One is that in over one hundred cities which have adopted the commission plan good men have been secured. The other is that under the business-like commission system far better results are obtained with men of moderate capacity in office than is obtained under the city council system.

There are the teresting to be told by the comptroller fallows and Canals that in of the Department of Railways and Canals that in operation of the past year the railways of Canada increased their earnings by 32.3 per cent. The salary of the commissioners is held up by the Standard as a large item of needless expenditure, but the city would save many times the salary in better service.

With regard to the election of an auditor, there does not appear to be any danger that a good man would not be elected. He is one of the people's safeguards, and they might fairly be assumed to have sufficient intelligence to choose one who would be both able and independent. An exchange gives this interesting item of news concerning practical Christianity:

"A Chicago Hebrew, the president of a great mail order house, has given $25,000 for the foundation of a negro Young Men's Christian association branch. He had already given money for a Y. M. C. tematic business methods prevail; but it is opposed to a radical change.

St. John has been trying long enough to patch up its city government so that business-like methods might be secured. All these efforts have failed. The mayor deplace that this is true, and the abler members of the council agree with him. The time has come for a radical change. The rommission plan of government has proved a success wherever tried. It should be adopted in St. John.

get highways and railroads. It has been the habit of mankind always to abandon one device when a better one was discovered. St. John is now about to abandon an outgrown system of city government for modern methods.

The Standard's second objection is that departure from the "British form of representative government" is threatened, and that we seem to be running after Yankee notions. A weaker objection could scarcely be imagined.

the present go-as-you-please system the eity is continually wasting money that would be put to good use in the inverses of the taxpayers by commissioners who were held personally responsible for their conduct of affairs. They would find their conduct of affairs. They would find the present go-as-you-please system the ing will be a new municipal building into. Is the Market Square the best location for it? St. John is growing and there will be many, who were held personally responsible for as is proposed.
