

General Business.

CARD.

R. A. LAWLOR, BARRISTER-AT-LAW, Solicitor Conveyancer Notary Public Etc CHATHAM, N. B.

NOTICE. WELDON THE TAILOR

Is offering the best Bargains ever offered to the People of Chatham.

Having purchased a large quantity of the famous... W. L. WELDON, Water St., Chatham, N. B.

NOTICE TO HOLDERS OF TIMBER LICENSES

The attention of all holders of Timber Licenses is called to Section 15 of the Timber Regulations...

FOR DISINFECTANT PURPOSES

CARBOLIC DISINFECTING POWDER, FOR SALE ONLY AT

HICKEY'S DRUG STORE.

The Subscriber intends travelling his well known... J. C. COUGHLIN, Owner.

4 BUILDING LOTS

FOR SALE on Princess, Victoria and Howard Streets. J. B. SNOBALL, Chatham, 12th April, 1898.

NOTICE OF SALE.

To Ignatius Redmond, of the parish of Chatham... J. B. SNOBALL, Chatham, 12th April, 1898.

NOTICE OF SALE.

To Ignatius Redmond, of the parish of Chatham... J. B. SNOBALL, Chatham, 12th April, 1898.

NOTICE OF SALE.

To Ignatius Redmond, of the parish of Chatham... J. B. SNOBALL, Chatham, 12th April, 1898.

NOTICE OF SALE.

To Ignatius Redmond, of the parish of Chatham... J. B. SNOBALL, Chatham, 12th April, 1898.

NOTICE OF SALE.

To Ignatius Redmond, of the parish of Chatham... J. B. SNOBALL, Chatham, 12th April, 1898.

NOTICE OF SALE.

To Ignatius Redmond, of the parish of Chatham... J. B. SNOBALL, Chatham, 12th April, 1898.

NOTICE OF SALE.

To Ignatius Redmond, of the parish of Chatham... J. B. SNOBALL, Chatham, 12th April, 1898.

NOTICE OF SALE.

To Ignatius Redmond, of the parish of Chatham... J. B. SNOBALL, Chatham, 12th April, 1898.

NOTICE OF SALE.

To Ignatius Redmond, of the parish of Chatham... J. B. SNOBALL, Chatham, 12th April, 1898.

NOTICE OF SALE.

To Ignatius Redmond, of the parish of Chatham... J. B. SNOBALL, Chatham, 12th April, 1898.

NOTICE OF SALE.

To Ignatius Redmond, of the parish of Chatham... J. B. SNOBALL, Chatham, 12th April, 1898.

Miramichi Advance.

CHATHAM, N. B., JULY 14, 1898.

The Was.

Since the destruction of Admiral Currier's schooner by that of Admiral Sampson, the United States forces have been closing in upon Santiago, and at last accounts, an assault was being made upon that city, and its capture within a few hours, is a foregone conclusion.

Local Politics.

For several years the Sun, which has acted as spokesman for a small section of the Conservative party of New Brunswick, has advocated the running of provincial elections on Dominion party lines.

The province would not be the gainer by such a change, but the Sun would be, and the Sun always considers its own interests in preference to those of the province.

The fact that the change is advocated by the Sun, which is really acting for the contracting element in its own party, has prevented the adoption of its plan over the larger area of the province.

A great deal of hard work on the part of conservatives who desired the principles of their party to prevail, and who honestly believed that the platform of the conservative party was the best in the interests of the whole country, New Brunswick became a stronghold of conservatism, but there was always a strong kick from the outside counties against the St. John element, and it was noteworthy that while Conservative victories were being won in all parts of the province, the Conservative candidates in St. John were constantly being defeated.

The reason for this was clear. The bootlickers and contractors controlled the Conservative party in St. John, and wanted no man whom they could not control. So long as the Conservative government was in power at Ottawa the St. John element did not care whether this constituency was supporting the government or opposed to it.

Indeed when the constituency was in opposition the party managers in St. John were better pleased, because they had a bigger personal pull at Ottawa. Look at the list of state aided enterprises in this city and what do you find? That half a dozen gentlemen who had the reputation of being contributors to election funds were in them all. It is this class of men who are now moving to introduce Dominion issues into provincial politics.

It is not the interests of the country that is disturbing these gentlemen as much as their individual interests. The province has been well governed during the past fourteen years by the men at the head of affairs. No names have been suggested by those who would advocate a change which would guarantee better government. In fact, the men whom the managers of the Conservative party would select would be such men as would help them to enrich themselves at the public expense. This has been their record in the past, and there are no signs of a change in the future.

The electors of New Brunswick have, time and again, pronounced against the introduction of Dominion issues into provincial politics, and when the opportunity arises they will pronounce themselves in the same way again. They will not permit even an imported editor to give them advice which they know is against their best interests.

A Good Showing.

The figures of Canada's financial operations for the past fiscal year are so favorable that there is every reason to believe that there will be a surplus of not less than $1,000,000. This will be the first surplus since the year 1893.

The precise figures of expenditure will not be known until the end of the year, but the total revenue on account of consolidated fund for the twelve months ending June 30th, amounts to $38,894,000, as compared with the total revenue for 1897, of $36,872,000, or an increase of over $2,000,000.

The revenue from customs, post office, public works, and railways and miscellaneous sources shows a large increase; but there is a heavy decrease of $1,300,000 from excise. The customs receipts for 1898 amounted to $21,467,000 as compared with $19,318,000 for 1897.

The amount to the credit of depositors in the Savings Banks is $48,277,000 as compared with $47,120,000 a year ago, showing an increase for 1898 of $1,147,000, which is an evidence of restored confidence throughout the country.

For the month of June the revenue was $3,221,000, against $2,314,000 in June, 1897, an increase of over $900,000, due to the increase in excise and customs. The post office revenue for the fiscal year just closed shows an increase over 1897 of $200,000, but for the month of June there is a falling off as compared with June, 1897, of $90,000, due no doubt to the sale of jubilee stamps, a year ago.

The Wood Trade.

Messrs. Farnworth & Jardine's Liverpool wood trade circular of the 1st inst. says:—

"The arrival from British North America during the past month has been 27,099 tons register, against 45,348 tons register, during the corresponding month of the year ago, and the aggregate tonnage to this date from all places during the years 1896, 1897, and 1898 has been 187,708, 197,137, and 150,639 tons respectively.

"New Brunswick and Nova Scotia spruce and pine deals.—Of spruce the import has been light, and the deliveries in moderate. There has been a sharp decline in values, chiefly owing to the fall in ocean freights, and sales are most difficult to effect."

The Templar's Disposition.

The suspension of The Templar, of Hamilton, one of the ablest and most sympathetic journalists published in Canada, is rather unfortunate for the prohibition cause on the eve of the plebiscite. It certainly was not for lack of ability or of energy that the paper was suspended, probably because the prevailing sympathy of the press with the cause of temperance, left no urgent need for a class journal especially advocating that which is generally upheld.

It is true the newspapers do not ride temperance or prohibition as a hobby, but the general tone is sympathetic along those lines. The Templar, however, made one mistake. It sought too often to justify its existence, by unfairly representing the press as hostile or inimical to the cause of temperance. But The Templar is dead—the temperance cause, however, is not. It will progress and march to success, because it accords with a higher ideal or aspiration of the human race and its elevation. Uplifting movements may temporarily wane, but only to be renewed with strength for a greater effort.

News and Notes.

John Kane, a farmer, of Chester, N. Y., in a conversation with a friend on Saturday, 2nd, about the causes of death, said:—

"I hope when my time comes I'll go suddenly, and I'd prefer to be struck by lightning."

While at work in a field on Monday Kane was struck by lightning and killed.

The Sussex Record says: A very unpleasant piece of news reaches us from Berwick. Rev. Thomas Pierce and a man named Smith were walking along the road together and while doing so the minister advised his companion to accompany him to a friend's house, who had been very friendly to late. Our informant says that Smith called the minister a liar and other offensive names and the minister gave Smith a slap on the side of the head, which enraged the latter so much that he seized Mr. Pierce and threw him over some poles at the roadside, breaking his leg badly, near the ankle.

The Montreal Star's cable despatch of 6th inst. says:—Hon. Edward Blake's speech in the House of Commons on the Irish financial claims is the subject of general talk in the Parliament. It was, in fact, Mr. Blake's greatest Parliamentary hit. The Westminster Gazette says: Mr. Blake the following tribute:—"Mr. Blake followed the Chancellor of the Exchequer and analyzed his arguments with great skill, proving himself master of Irish financial statistics and an adroit and dexterous opponent in controversy. The House of Commons showed its admiration of his abilities by frequent applause. Subsequently in the lobby some of the most generous tributes to Mr. Blake's powers were offered by his political opponents."

550 Drowned and Murdered in a Shipwreck!

A French Liner Sinks and Her Crew and Passengers Perish—Saves and Kill Others!

One of the most shocking sea-disasters on record took place on 4th instant about five o'clock in the morning in a fog sixty miles south of St. John's. The French ocean greyhound La Bourgoise, Capt. Dolanec, from New York, for Havre, ran, at full speed, into the British iron ship Cromartyshire, Capt. Henderson, striking the latter a side-blow and putting away her bows. The steamer had on board seven hundred and fourteen persons all told. She sank in a comparatively short time, which is variously stated from fifteen to fifty minutes.

Five hundred and fifty were lost and one hundred and sixty-four saved. One hundred and five of the saved were members of the steamer's crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

ally upheld. It is true the newspapers do not ride temperance or prohibition as a hobby, but the general tone is sympathetic along those lines. The Templar, however, made one mistake. It sought too often to justify its existence, by unfairly representing the press as hostile or inimical to the cause of temperance. But The Templar is dead—the temperance cause, however, is not. It will progress and march to success, because it accords with a higher ideal or aspiration of the human race and its elevation. Uplifting movements may temporarily wane, but only to be renewed with strength for a greater effort.

News and Notes. John Kane, a farmer, of Chester, N. Y., in a conversation with a friend on Saturday, 2nd, about the causes of death, said:—

"I hope when my time comes I'll go suddenly, and I'd prefer to be struck by lightning."

While at work in a field on Monday Kane was struck by lightning and killed.

The Sussex Record says: A very unpleasant piece of news reaches us from Berwick. Rev. Thomas Pierce and a man named Smith were walking along the road together and while doing so the minister advised his companion to accompany him to a friend's house, who had been very friendly to late. Our informant says that Smith called the minister a liar and other offensive names and the minister gave Smith a slap on the side of the head, which enraged the latter so much that he seized Mr. Pierce and threw him over some poles at the roadside, breaking his leg badly, near the ankle.

The Montreal Star's cable despatch of 6th inst. says:—Hon. Edward Blake's speech in the House of Commons on the Irish financial claims is the subject of general talk in the Parliament. It was, in fact, Mr. Blake's greatest Parliamentary hit. The Westminster Gazette says: Mr. Blake the following tribute:—"Mr. Blake followed the Chancellor of the Exchequer and analyzed his arguments with great skill, proving himself master of Irish financial statistics and an adroit and dexterous opponent in controversy. The House of Commons showed its admiration of his abilities by frequent applause. Subsequently in the lobby some of the most generous tributes to Mr. Blake's powers were offered by his political opponents."

550 Drowned and Murdered in a Shipwreck!

A French Liner Sinks and Her Crew and Passengers Perish—Saves and Kill Others!

One of the most shocking sea-disasters on record took place on 4th instant about five o'clock in the morning in a fog sixty miles south of St. John's. The French ocean greyhound La Bourgoise, Capt. Dolanec, from New York, for Havre, ran, at full speed, into the British iron ship Cromartyshire, Capt. Henderson, striking the latter a side-blow and putting away her bows. The steamer had on board seven hundred and fourteen persons all told. She sank in a comparatively short time, which is variously stated from fifteen to fifty minutes.

Five hundred and fifty were lost and one hundred and sixty-four saved. One hundred and five of the saved were members of the steamer's crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

ally upheld. It is true the newspapers do not ride temperance or prohibition as a hobby, but the general tone is sympathetic along those lines. The Templar, however, made one mistake. It sought too often to justify its existence, by unfairly representing the press as hostile or inimical to the cause of temperance. But The Templar is dead—the temperance cause, however, is not. It will progress and march to success, because it accords with a higher ideal or aspiration of the human race and its elevation. Uplifting movements may temporarily wane, but only to be renewed with strength for a greater effort.

News and Notes. John Kane, a farmer, of Chester, N. Y., in a conversation with a friend on Saturday, 2nd, about the causes of death, said:—

"I hope when my time comes I'll go suddenly, and I'd prefer to be struck by lightning."

While at work in a field on Monday Kane was struck by lightning and killed.

The Sussex Record says: A very unpleasant piece of news reaches us from Berwick. Rev. Thomas Pierce and a man named Smith were walking along the road together and while doing so the minister advised his companion to accompany him to a friend's house, who had been very friendly to late. Our informant says that Smith called the minister a liar and other offensive names and the minister gave Smith a slap on the side of the head, which enraged the latter so much that he seized Mr. Pierce and threw him over some poles at the roadside, breaking his leg badly, near the ankle.

The Montreal Star's cable despatch of 6th inst. says:—Hon. Edward Blake's speech in the House of Commons on the Irish financial claims is the subject of general talk in the Parliament. It was, in fact, Mr. Blake's greatest Parliamentary hit. The Westminster Gazette says: Mr. Blake the following tribute:—"Mr. Blake followed the Chancellor of the Exchequer and analyzed his arguments with great skill, proving himself master of Irish financial statistics and an adroit and dexterous opponent in controversy. The House of Commons showed its admiration of his abilities by frequent applause. Subsequently in the lobby some of the most generous tributes to Mr. Blake's powers were offered by his political opponents."

550 Drowned and Murdered in a Shipwreck!

A French Liner Sinks and Her Crew and Passengers Perish—Saves and Kill Others!

One of the most shocking sea-disasters on record took place on 4th instant about five o'clock in the morning in a fog sixty miles south of St. John's. The French ocean greyhound La Bourgoise, Capt. Dolanec, from New York, for Havre, ran, at full speed, into the British iron ship Cromartyshire, Capt. Henderson, striking the latter a side-blow and putting away her bows. The steamer had on board seven hundred and fourteen persons all told. She sank in a comparatively short time, which is variously stated from fifteen to fifty minutes.

Five hundred and fifty were lost and one hundred and sixty-four saved. One hundred and five of the saved were members of the steamer's crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.

The ship with which the steamer collided had a collision bulkhead, which saved her, and as the fog lifted, Capt. Dolanec and his crew, who were rescued by simply taking possession of the boats and life rafts and murdering passengers and others who endeavored to get in or upon these with them. Of about two hundred women on board only one was saved. Such a story of inhumanity and murder is hardly to be believed, but it is true, and those who should have tried to save and protect them, has never been in connection with any previous disaster at sea.