

Newspaper Women Among Delegates

While Observed as Writers
Attending National Council
They Are Excellent
Speakers, Able to Put
Their Thoughts into Words

Among the delegates to the National Council were a number of newspaper women and it is pleasant to observe that while they are known as writers, they are no less excellent speakers and are well able to put their thoughts into words as well as on paper.

Chief among these, though she has spoken less than many would like to hear, is Mrs. Jessie C. McIver, Editor of the Woman's Century. Mrs. McIver was born and brought up in Edinburgh, Scotland, and came to Canada in 1882. She found her first interest in the Toronto Local Council of Women and the inspiration it gave her led her to start this magazine which she did with her own capital with boundless hope, fourteen subscribers and no advertising. She launched the little magazine against the protests of her friends feeling that the women of Canada should have an official voice and the National Council adopted it as their organ.

Her work in the Toronto Local Council in Household Economics is outstanding. The official relation between the National Council and the Woman's Century no longer exists, but the Council has endorsed the Century as a woman's magazine.

During the war Mrs. McIver had two sons overseas and she received fresh inspiration in her work from many sources. She is frequently consulted by many who come to Toronto and in her office find help and encouragement or the information they desire. She is never too busy to help another woman.

Personally, Mrs. McIver is that type of Scottish woman who has limitless faith and broad vision without selfishness. She has a dream of what Canadian women may be and she feels that the National Council is the medium for fulfilling that dream. She is retiring and self-effacing, bringing the best from others rather than thrusting herself forward.

Mrs. McIver was the first woman admitted to the Woman's Century Press Club and is a member both of the Women's Press Association and of the Toronto Women's Press Club. She was yesterday elected by acclamation Convener of Household Economics.

Mrs. E. M. Murray.

Anyone who has attended the National Council meetings will remember this member of the Halifax Echo Staff for she has a personality not to be soon forgotten. She is one of the Vice-Presidents of the Halifax Local Council and if the sister city is ever forgotten by anyone, it is not the fault of this loyal daughter.

For about twenty years Mrs. Murray has been an editorial writer on various papers, receiving her earliest training in Boston. She has collaborated in writing books and stories during an eight years residence in New York.

In Halifax she was instrumental in establishing the first sanitary fish market stall in the name of the Household League of which she was president. She also introduced certified milk into Halifax in an attempt to clean up the milk situation, and to reduce infant mortality. In the better housing campaign, Mrs. Murray has been very active for the protection of children and the improvement of the homes. The Echo's editorial policy makes a specialty of civil matters.

Mrs. Murray's paper on Taxation read at a recent meeting of the National Council showed an exhaustive study and that she is familiar with many of the best authorities on this important question. She was elected Vice-President on Taxation.

She is a lecturer on economical and social questions such as citizenship and taxation but is said by her friends to be just as well versed in the gentle art of cooking. Mrs. Murray is not averse to giving her opinion, but she knows whereof she speaks and is always ready to stand up for her principles and to support strongly what she believes.

Mrs. L. A. Hamilton.

Others who are known as writers are Mrs. L. A. Hamilton one of the editors of the Woman's Century and who is recognized as a woman of outstanding ability, clear mind, wonderful command of language and a calm manner which influences for good those who come into contact with her. A sketch of Mrs. Hamilton's career has been given in the Standard.

Mrs. Graham.

Mrs. Graham of London, Ontario is another newspaper woman who has been referred to before in these pages. During the convention she has made many friends for herself by her bright personality, concise way of speaking and the fact that she has been deeply interested in Council work for a number of years. She is the social, church and charitable writer on the Echo of London, Ontario.

MONEY RATES

GO SKYWARD

New York, June 24.—Call money got up to 11 and 12 per cent in the early afternoon and later to 14 per cent. The first advance did not affect stocks, though gradually small losses took place of earlier gains.

The market displayed rather more resistance to pressure in the last hour and on the whole the closing prices represented a slight recovery from the day's loss. The Street takes the view that the day's high money rates, much the highest of the week, are a check on the highest of the Federal Reserve tax payment coming close to the time of the July 1 interest and dividend disbursements.

UNITED STATES

NOT OBJECTING

To Mandate Over Armenia
Being Given to Greece.

BY F. W. WILE.

Washington, June 24.—No serious opposition from this government was learned today, might be expected if the Allies yielded to the expressed desire of Greece for a mandate over Armenia. It would not interfere in the slightest with the work that President Wilson now has in hand of fixing the boundaries of the new states, as the rights that would be given Greece would be for the territory as determined by the decision of the president.

The position of this government, it is said, is that as long as the senate through its action has shown very plainly that it is not in favor of the acceptance of the mandate by the United States, this nation cannot enter valid objections to the proposal of Greece unless it is shown by investigation that the Greek proposal was made for some ulterior purpose, or with some aim in view that would work to the detriment of the Armenian people.

HAS PLAN TO RAISE

SUNKEN LUSITANIA

French Expert Would Build
Monster Float and Salvage
Torpedoed Liner.

BY HENRY W. FRANCIS.

Paris, June 24.—The liner Lusitania, whose torpedo-placed hull now is resting on the Atlantic Ocean bed seven miles off the coast of Ireland can be refloated and repaired with undue difficulty in the opinion of Emile Bertin, member of the French Academy of Science and an expert in salvaging sunken vessels.

A monster float made of steel and able to support a weight of 30,000 tons could be constructed, he writes. "This float could be attached to the sunken hull by steel ropes hooked into the vessel's portholes. When the tide goes down the ropes could be drawn taut and secured. The rising tide would then lift the float and with it the sunken hull from the ocean bed. Then the float, with its load, could be towed shoreward, to a shallower point where, as the hull rests on the bottom, the operation of tightening the cables at low tide could be repeated and the vessel raised again. In this way the hull could be lifted about four metres each time and eventually brought to the surface."

"The operation would be long, delicate and costly, but there is no doubt about its practicability."

SPECIAL SQUADRON

IN MEXICAN WATERS

"Big Stick" Kept Handy to Chastise Naughty Children
—Fleet of Nine Chosen for Work.

By F. W. WILE.

Washington, June 24.—The formation of a special service squadron for duties in Mexican and South American waters was announced today by Rear Admiral Robert Counts, acting Secretary of the Navy. The squadron which is expected to take up its duties the first of October, marks a departure in Navy policy in that it stations a fleet of nine vessels which will operate from the Canal zone as an emergency that may arise.

There has hardly been a time since the fall of Diaz that American warships have not been stationed in Mexican waters, more especially in the vicinity of the Tampico oil fields, but this is the first time that a base has been established. The vessels which will operate from the Canal zone are all of lighter draft so that they may make Mexico and Central American ports that dreadnoughts and other large vessels could not enter.

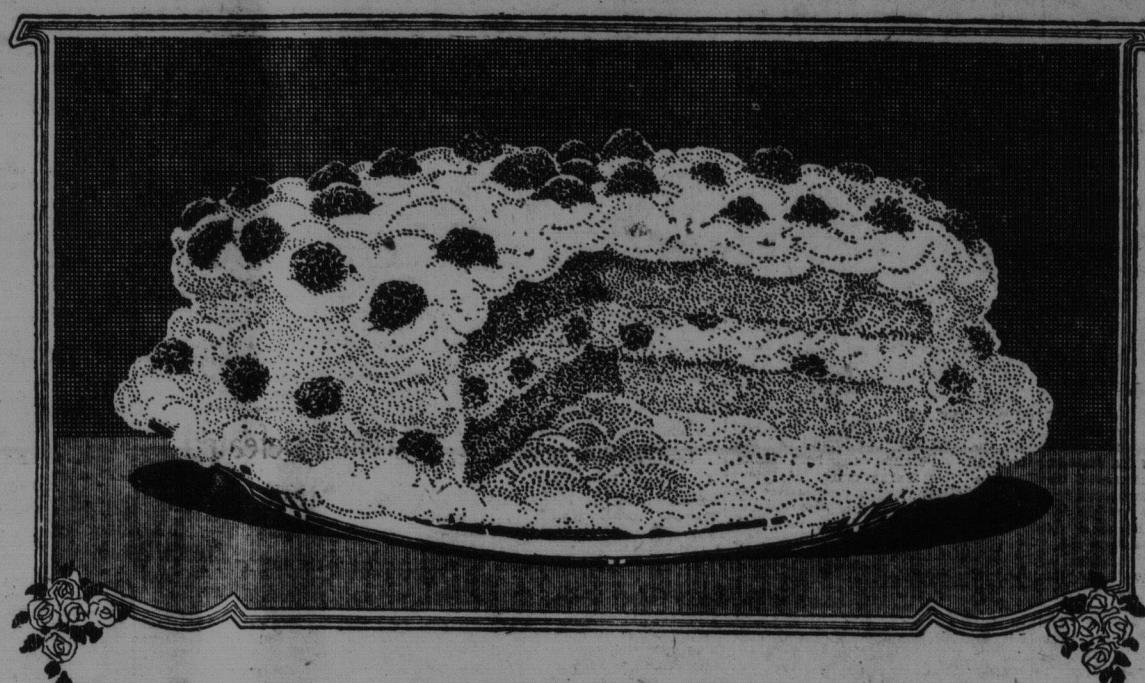

"The formation of this squadron will allow vessels to be in readiness at all times for any special service that may be called for," said Admiral Counts, "and will relieve the command-in-chief of the Atlantic and Pacific fleets of the necessity of from time to time drawing away vessels of their fleets from legitimate duties and interfering with progress of target practice, manoeuvres and drills. The headquarters of this special service squadron will be the Canal zone and it will be capable of operating on either both coasts if occasion requires."

An Epidemic of Twins.

Every clerk of the staff of a certain Winnipeg bank is required to sign his name in the register on arrival at the office in the morning, and, if late, must give the reason therefor. The chief cause of tardiness is usually street car hold-ups, and the first man to arrive late generally writes his reason as "Wife had twins" and twenty other late men mechanically signed "ditto" underneath.

RESUME OF OLD CO STIFF CONTESTS

Will be Something Doing W
England — International
Wounded at Verdun, Ma
Duncan, But Lost.

London, June 23.—Even if there were no Olympic games this year, we could look forward to a remarkable season. The latest announcement that a team of Princeton University athletes will meet the pick of Oxford in London on July 31st, is interesting. Should the ten events be the same as those on the Oxford vs. Cambridge programme then it is practically assured that the five field events—high and low jumps, hurdles, shot put and hammer throw—will all go to the Americans. This will leave the Oxford men the hard task of winning the running events to even matters up. Seeing that Pennsylvania University only narrowly beat Princeton in points for the American Intercollegiate Championship, it is clear that the Dark Blues will be confronted with a hard task. It is equally plain that the burden will rest on the shoulders of B. G. D. Ridd, the brilliant South African runner, who virtually won the Inter-Varsity sports for Oxford. He will be the hope of the 100, 400 and 800 yards and is quite capable of winning all three. Montague ought to take the three miles and it will be up to the Oxford men to do his bid.

One very pleasing matter about the Princeton vs. Oxford sports is that it ensures the English "Varsity" cranks being fit in July and it should tempt them to compete in the English championships a week before they meet Princeton.

South Africa's Strong Man.

The arrival of further members of the South African team for the Olympic games, makes it clear that this part of the Empire is likely to cut a proud figure at the festival. What a host of boxers, tennis players, cyclists, runners, a walker and a hurdler to do duty, the wearers of the green jersey with the gold emblem are sure to command attention. From all one can gather, the members of the team are making excellent progress in their training, and strong hopes are entertained that with a bigger team, even a greater measure of success will be secured than at the 1908 and 1912 games in London and Stockholm respectively.

England's Boxing Star.

England's boxing star is not in the ascendant just now, the international bouts at Holland Park on Monday having ended in disaster for the home men. The venue constitutes a new departure by the National Sporting Club, the management recognizing that the clubhouse in Covent Garden is not large enough for special bouts. The first international brought Arthur Wynns, of Belgium, and Mike Honeyman, of England, together, for the title of European featherweight champion. The former showed that he is a powerful hitter by knocking out Francis Rossi a few weeks ago and it came as no surprise when he treated Honeyman in a like manner. The home man is a mere tapper and quite failed to hurt his man, who put him out in the tenth round.

Though Jim Higgins had only taken part in four important matches prior to Monday, he was strongly backed against Charles Ledoux, of France, in spite of the latter having beaten such a great boxer as Jim Driscoll. The bantamweight championship of Europe was at issue and few recent matches have aroused greater interest in London. Higgins put up a wonderfully good showing against the more experienced rival and considering that he is not yet twenty, he may be said to have made his mark, even though he was knocked out in the eleventh round. The contest was a splendid one, in spite of there being a lot of head to head work and clinching. Higgins was knocked down in the third round after he had shown to much advantage. This made him more careful and when he got a chance to stand off and box he scored with lefts and rights. In the sixth, eighth and tenth rounds he did splendidly and was well able to point his willow. He also appeared to be the stronger on his legs. As this stage he looked to have a big chance, though the Frenchman was always dangerous with his harder punch. The eleventh round was a surprise, as Ledoux commenced to fight at a great pace and after about two minutes of fighting Higgins was dropped, fairly beaten to a standstill.

The winner is a demon fighter and can stand a lot of punishment whilst able to hit like a lightweight. Higgins will go far and with added experience and the cultivation of a harder punch, he may take world championship honors.

Golf.

The big professional golf tournament at Glenagles finally resolved itself into a duel between G. Duncan, of Scotland, and Arnaud Massay, of France, who has disposed of J. H. Taylor and J. Sherrick respectively in the semi-finals. The contest is a long one and this favored Duncan's long driving with the wood clubs. Massay, however, was very accurate on the greens and in spite of a bad start, he made a good fight of it. Duncan did the first nine holes in 34 and Massay's 43. Massay's 43 was a surprise, as he was the first to get up at the turn. Undismayed, the French player won three and halved two of the next five and reduced the difference to two holes. He then showed a chance that the finish would be exciting. Duncan was very steady, however, and doing the fifteenth hole in three and halving the next, he secured victory by 3 up and 2 to play. Duncan, with Abe Mitchell, represent the newer school and one of the pairs is strongly backed to defeat Vernon Taylor and Brad of the old brigade in the championship. Massay, it may
