The Widow's Son

By Mrs. E. Southworth

grieve so much in staying away, and I know they grieve so much at my absence, still I must stay away for their sakes, sorrow is better than a home repeated Lily May for the twentieth time.

"And you will not explain this mystery to me?"

"I cannot, dear, kind friend, I cannot. I would if I could."

"Mary," said the lady, gravely "you love these friends that you have left, you love them very much."

"Oh, yes, yes, yes, Heaven only knows how much! It is because I love them so that I stay away from them."

"But, Mary, is there not one among them that you love far more than the others?"

"Oh, yes, yes!"

"And which is that one, my dear? You may answer me freely. It is a friend's question."

"Oh, I know it is, dear lady, and will answer truly. It is my dear brother that I love most that I love more than my own life and soul! And he deserves it! he is so good and nob."

The lady did not reply in words but she put her arms around the girl's neck and drew her to her bosom. It was this brother, who was really no brother, that Lily May was grieving after.

Meanwhile Arthur Powis was fretting and fuming over the "law's delays," or rather the detective's. Apparently the police found great difficulty in tracing Mrs. Llewellyn, for a fortnight passed before they discovered even the line of travel she had taken and then the sum total of their knowledge was only this, that she had gone southward. Two of his most says Doctor Connor, formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital. Thousands of men suffering from fatal diseases would be in perfect health to-day were it not for the deadly drug, nicotine. Stop the habit now before it's too late. It's a simple matter to rid the body of the tobacco habit in any form. Just go to any up-to-date drug store and get some Nicotol tablets; take them as directed, and lo! the pernicious habit quickly vanishes. Druggists refund the money if they fail. Be sure to read large and interesting advertisement by Doctor Connor seen in this paper. It tells of the danger of nicotine, and the cure. Avoid it! In the meantime try Nicotol tablets; you will be surprised at the result.

Gas in the Stomach Is Dangerous

Recommends Daily Use of Magnesia To Overcome Trouble.

Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that flat bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bismarck Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloated right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and there is no sourness or pain. Bismarck Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

MRS. MAY COULD NOT WORK

Made Well and Strong by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Columbia, Pa.—"I was very weak and run down and had dragging-down pains and pains in my back. I could not get around to do my work and had to sit down and rest often during the day. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the papers and read the testimonials, so I thought I would try it. Now I am healthier than I was in my life, and can recommend it to any woman who suffers as I did."

The reason Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so successful in overcoming woman's ills is because it contains the tonic strengthening properties of good old fashioned roots and herbs, which act on the female organism. Women from all parts of the country are continually testifying to its strengthening, curative influence, and the letters which we are constantly publishing from women in every section of this country prove beyond question the merit of this famous root and herb medicine.

REAL VALUE

is based, not on the price paid for a commodity, but on the benefit derived. That is why Zam-Buk is the cheapest skin healer on the market—because the benefit derived is 85% greater than can be got from ordinary ointments. This is due to the fact that Zam-Buk is all medicine—100%. Ordinary ointments are 5% medicine and the balance animal fat.

The superiority of Zam-Buk is proved by the many cases of chronic skin trouble and old sores which yield to the power of Zam-Buk after all other treatments have failed. The unusual power of penetration which Zam-Buk possesses enables it to reach the underlying tissues, where skin troubles have their "root." Then the germicidal properties in Zam-Buk destroy all germs. Until this is done healing can never be thorough. The reason why sores that have been treated with ordinary ointments break out again is because the remedy has never got to the seat of the trouble, but has only healed over the outer skin. Zam-Buk, on the contrary, uproots skin disease, and the cure is complete and permanent.

Zam-Buk should always be used for eczema, ringworm, scalp sores, pimples, abscesses, ulcers, blood-poisoning, bad leg, piles, cuts, burns and scalds. All dealers or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, 50c. box, 3 for $1.25.

Zam-Buk

experienced detectives—Beek and White—were sent in pursuit of her. Another week passed without news. And Arthur Powis became very impatient, for he did not wish to leave the country before the arrest of this woman, and yet his passage was taken on the steamer that was to sail on the first of October, and that day was very near at hand.

There was not the slightest reason, however, why Arthur Powis should rush off to Europe just at this time. The ostensible object of the voyage was to seek out and become acquainted with the impoverished young baronet who represented the elder branch of the Llewellyn family, and the failure of Gladys's children would be the heirs of her estate. But that affair could have waited, and Arthur might have remained in New York for an indefinite period.

But the truth of the matter was simply this: Arthur Powis, like most other idle men of fortune, without trade, profession or business to engage him, or children to settle him, was extremely restless, never easy long in one place, always wanting to be going. And a sad chance over land and sea he led poor Gladys, for he never would go anywhere without her, she was all the world to him. And now he wanted to be off again. Wales was an unexplored scene, the young heir of Llewellyn an unknown person, and as novelties both were interesting. It was a few days before the steamer on which he had engaged passages was expected to sail that he was sitting at breakfast with his wife and her protegee, when the postman knocked, and the servant who went to the door brought in the morning's papers.

There were none for Gladys, her correspondence was very limited, indeed, she was never long enough in one place to form a circle of acquaintances, much less a party of friends. And there were none, of course, for Lily May.

There were only a few for Arthur and they were of a trifling business character. He opened, glanced over and threw them aside carelessly one by one until he took up a particular letter which, as soon as he saw the postmark he eagerly tore open and rapidly perused.

"What is that, Arthur?" inquired Gladys, who had watched him until he finished the letter.

"It is from the detective, Beek who went after Mrs. Llewellyn. He has—But I will read you the letter," said Arthur, Powis, unfolding the paper and beginning:

Forest Lodge, Sept. 20, 18—

My Dear Sir—The game that we have run to earth. I may say truly that we were in at the death. In plain terms, the party that we were sent after we found in this country house, that is to say, residing here, but she had gone out for a ride and we waited for her return. But she never came back as she went. Her horse did, dragging the broken carriage behind him. We then went in search of the lady whom we found bruised, wounded and insensible by the roadside. We brought her back at once to the house, and sent for the nearest doctor. But all he could do was to restore her senses for a few hours after which she sank and died. This ended our business with her. At first every body thought that that she had been thrown from her carriage and killed by the fall. But the examination of the doctor, as well as the dying words of the lady proved that she had been set on and robbed and murdered by her servant, the treacherous dead-mute named Judas Blackmore. The coroner's inquest sat to-day and found a verdict of willful murder against Judas Blackmore. The funeral of the lady took place this afternoon. The murderer is still at large, and I am remaining here to assist in the pursuit of him. For though, as the magistrate said, I cannot act officially, I can give these simple country fellows a hint or two to guide them in their search. It is whispered that the lady confided to the minister who was with her in her last hours a packet, the contents of which were to be kept a profound secret, even from her son. Hoping this will satisfy you, sir, I remain respectfully, your obedient servant,

Benjamin Beek.

Arthur finished the letter and folded it up. Neither he nor Gladys spoke for several minutes.

"It was very shocking," at length whispered Gladys, shuddering.

"Yes, it was, slowly assented Arthur.

"Well, dearest, your business with the wretched woman is over, as well with the detectives," said the wife.
