Air and Water Test. Fill a glass with water and, without removing it from the vessel in which you filled it, stand it upside down under the water until you are ready to use it. Now take an empty glass and turn this directly mouth downward into the same vessel of water, and no matter how hard you press it downward no water will flow into it, for it is not really empty, as you at first supposed. It is filled with air, which takes up room, and this must flow out before water can enter it. Now, keeping the first glass, which is filled with water, mouth downward, raise it near the surface, though not above the water. Now carefully turn the glass of air under the water so that its mouth communicates with the mouth of the water filled glass. Since air is lighter than water, the air from the lower vessel will flow up into the water filled glass, and the water which was in the glass will flow down into the glass which had contained air. If the glass which contained air had contained ed oil, which is lighter than water, the same experiment could have been per-formed, and the upper glass would have received the oil.

The Toilet of Little Auts. A naturalist has been making obser vations on the toilet of certain ants and has discovered that each insect goes through most elaborate ablutions. They are not only performed by ker-self, but by another, who acts for the time as lady's maid. The assistant starts by washing the face of her com-panion and then goes over the whole body. The attitude of the ant that is being washed is one of intense satisfaction. She lies down, with all her limbs stretched loosely out; she rolls over on her side, even her back, a perfect picture of ease. The pleasure the little insect shows in thus being combed and sponged is really enjoyable to the

A Dodge With a Dime

Undertake to make a coin fly out of a wineglass without touching either. Place a dime at the bottom of a wineglass and fit a larger coin, such as a half dollar, about a quarter of an inch from the top, making a lid. Now blow sharply on one side of the lid. This will turn to a vertical position, and the force of the air passing underneath the larger coin will drive the dime out at the other side.

Buer Commandant Once Captured by the

"If Col. Sam Hughes will come to Grai judland I'll guarante him a reception to which his Lindsay reception on returning from the war won't be a patch," said Commancant De Jongh, one of the Boer officers of the late war, as he sat in Inspector Hughes' office, Toronto, one morning in January List, with Lindsay's redoubtable warrior bold beside him. The two had met before spector Hughes' office, Toronto, one morning in January h.st. with Lindsay's redoubtable warrior bold beside him. The two had met before in South Africa, and a sudden attachment had been formed between them. In fact, De Jongh, along with 300 men under him, had been taken into custody by Col. Hughes, who had followed them for 125 miles with only 18 men. The Commandant has a frank admiration for the clever dare-deviltry of a colonel who could perform such a feat. The two of them had also been mixed up in other interesting encounters in South Africa, in which they would have taken each other's lives with the greatest zest. Now they lunch together, and on the friendliest possile terms. They fought their battless o're again and vittor and vanquished accepted the issue with the greatest mutual good will. Commandant De Jongh says this spirit is quite typical of the present feeling among the great majority of the Boar. He came to Toronto largely because of Colonel Sam Hughes' influence, and he expects to make his home here. He says that probably many more of his compatriots, a tracted by reports of Canadian prospeity and Canadian liberty, will emigrate soon to this country.

In the early part of the war De Jongh was in Kruger's secret service in Cape Colony. After that heled a command in Graquuland until captured by Colonel Hughes. He was one of the party of Boers who surprised the British under General Warren at Faber's Put. Col. Hughes was in charge of one of the gums which fought off the attack. The Boer warrior told of how they crept through the British ranks and opened up on the surprised British toops at dawn, and Col. Hughes gave the version of the fight from his point of view. The British lost some 25 men killed and a number of the fight from his point of view. The British toops at dawn, and Col. Hughes gave the version of the fight from his point of view. gave the version of the fight from his point of view. The British lost some 25 men killed and a number wounded. The Boer loss, according to Commandant De Jongh, was not more than 20 killed and wounded. Both soldiers apparently greatly enjoyed the fight.

Both soldiers apparently greatly enjoyed the fight.

"The Boers of Graiqualand," said the commandant, "would be glad to follow Col. Hughes anywhere. They would have been only too glad to have taken service under him if he were not fighting for their enemies."

Col. Flughes looked happy, and Col. Hughes looked happy, and changed the subject to a trial of marksmanship he once had with some of De Jongh's friends in South Africa.

The visiting Boer officer is a comparatively young man, of pleas-ant address, who speaks English perfectly. Apparently he was a worthy foe for Colonel Hughes, and he now accepts defeat gracefully, and has shaken hands with the victors.

INVASION OF CANADA. An Interesting Paper Read Before the Colonial Institute.

In his paper, "The Canadian West and Northwest," which was read recently at the meeting of the Royal Colonial Institute, London, Mr. W. Albert Hickman said he did not believe that the American invasion involved the slightest danger to British interests. He had the pleasure of going north in the Saskatchewan country with a special train containing 166 American capitalists to buy Canadian land. The train was placountry with a special train containing 166 American capitalists to buy Canadian land. The train was placarded "Special Train of the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company," which company bought no less than one million acres of land. He had studied the invading army carefully and it impressed him that the majority of them appreciated British institutions, and became good Canadian citizens with great rapidity. He looked upon this investment of many millions of American money in Canadian lands as but the forging of one more chain in the already existing informal alliance—the Anglo-American confederation. Figures led him to the inference that in 15 years the United States would not be exthe United States would not be exporting one bushel of wheat. All would be required for home consumption, and her wheat lands would sumption, and her wheat lands would all be under cultivation. The United Kingdom might then look to getting her wheat supply from the Canadian plains—and much of her supply of meat and dairy produce also. Some of them who were in that room would eat bread made from flour of wheat grown in the valley of the Peace River as sure as day was day. Last year the Hudson Bay Company sent a $10,000 roller flour mill into Fort Vermillion on the Peace River, and for all he knew some of them might have eaten bread from there already.

Problem of Immunity.

Prof. J. J. McKenzie of the University of Toronto lectured at the Canadian Institute on Saturday night on "Recent theories in regard to the causes of immunity to infectious disease." He sketched the history of our knowledge of immunity and said Ehrlich's observations have shown that the conditions which determine that the conditions which determine the death of a microbe introduced into the blood depend upon the presence of two substances, the first of which is specific and acts only upon the specific microbe, the other of which is common to the blood of which is common to the blood of thiost animals. The practical endeaver of bacteriologists has been not only to increase the amount of specific substances which has proved cific substances which has proved fairly easy but also to increase the amount of the non-specific substance which so far has proved difficult. These observations have shown also that the question of immunity is of much broader bearing than the mere question of prevention or cure of infectious disease, because it is evident from the results so far obtained that it has a bearing upon the whole it has a bearing upon the whole question of the nutrition of the ani-

FAMILIAR PHRASES.

Many Used in Our Daily Conversation-Have Unknown Sources for the Most of Us.

How few of the phrases that we inroduce into our daily conversation have we ever traced to their source! Take, for instance, the expression As good as a play." Which among us have realized that its parent was none other than Charles 11., who none other than Charles 11., who used it whilst attending the House of Lords during the passing of the Divorce bill? "Defend me from my friends!" Again, how rarely it is remembered that this was the witty request of Marshal Villars to Louis XIV.; or that "Eureka" was the exclamation of Archimedes when he had solved an anxious problem. It was Tallyrand who said "Surtout, point de zele," and Chateaubriand's were those, "I have wept and believed," so often misquoted. The words, "Let the cobbler stick to his last," have been attributed to many as wrong man, instead of to the right person, the painter Apelles, who really uttered them, and also those "Noday without its line."

Brougham's "The pursuit of knowledge with the said of the properties of the said of the properties of the said of the sertion "The Golden Age is before, and not behind us." "Let him who loves me follow me" was spoken by Napoleon, and that other brilliant soldier. Comte de Laroche-jaquelin, soldier. Comte de Laroche-Jaquelin, addressed to his men the weil-known words, "If I advance, follow me; if I withdraw, slay me; if I fall, avenge me." The French Revolution brought forth many memorable phrases. "Do you think revolutions are made with rosewater" was asked by Chamfort. An unforgettable felicity of Napoleon's is that "There is only one step from the sublime to is only one step from the sublime to the ridiculous." "Another such victory and we are undone," sometimes attributed to Napoleon, was in reality said by Pyrrhus of Epirus. That a person is "indebted to his memory for his jests and his imagination for for his jests and his imagination for his facts," is due to Sheridan, wheo of happy phrases has left his coun-try a peculiarly rich legacy.
