BENO, THE HUMAN WONDER. Stuck Awls Into His Head and Ate Strychnine.

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 23 .- Harry Beno, a sideshow man, known as "Be-no, the wonder," died last week at the City Hospital from paralysis, which resulted from his daily perform ance of the awl trick. This consisted in driving an awl or other sharp instrument into his skull. For years he performed this daily, and apparently performed this daily, and apparently suffered no serious results. While at a small town in southern Missouri last summer Beno struck the awl an unusually hard blow, driving it so far into his head that it penetrated the brain. He was brought to the hospital here, and after a month's treatment it was believed he would recover. But another one of Beno's feats was to eat drugs, and this shattered his constitution. While he was at the hospital the surgeons examined Beno's hospital the surgeons examined Beno's skull and found that his feat of driving the awl into his head was genuine. A dozen holes were found in the top of his head, and many others which had healed. Beno, the surgeons say, was fitted by nature for the feat, in that he had an unusually thick skull. It was nearly three-quarters of an inch thick. The other accomplishment for which ousands have paid to see Beno was that of eating strychnine. It was said that in one dose he could eat sufficient to kill nine or ten men. The hospital surgeons made an experiment, and found that he was able to take three or four grains with no evil results.

A Husband's Responsibility.

A Husband's Responsibility.

Toronto, Nov. 23. — That a husband is liable for slanders and other retorts by his wife was held by a Divisional Court in a decision handed out on Saturday in the Peterboro' case of Traviss v. Hales. The plaintiff sued for damages for slander by Mrs. Richard Hales, making the husband a joint defendant. Mr. Justice Street, who tried the action, found for the plaintiff, and awarded $1 damages, with costs, holding that before the married woman's property act of 1884 a husband was liable in damages for torts by his wife. The Divisional Court has upheld this decision. The effect is to hold that the married woman's property act was passed for the benefit of wives and not of husbands.

Curious Bits of News.

"Idle" is not the word to describe Prince Ludwig Ferdinand of Bavaria. He is a general in the German army. By profession he is a surgeon. During the past summer he has been playing first violin in the orchestra of the Munich Opera House. He attended his clinic before going to rehearsals for the Wagner performances. There are more princes usefully occupied than cynics may be willing to admit.

Mr. Edward Palckert of Stratford, Ont., whose forefathers lived in Germany, is the possessor of a Martin Luther Bible which is believed to be the only one on the continent of America. The history of the volume can be traced for nearly 400 years. It was handed down from father to son in the Palckert family until it was brought to Stratford by the til it was brought to Stratford by the father of the present owner. The volume contains a record of the births and deaths in Martin Luther's family.

The Paris police have prepared a picture-book for the use of travelers—who lose things which because of unfamiliarity with the language, they cannot describe. In Prince Edward Island there is a striking example of that longevity which is characteristic of so many parts of Canada. At Tignish, in that island, live an old couple, Mr. and Mrs. Colo Poirier by name, who have been married over 70 years, and now have 201 descendants. Seven of their children are alive and with their large families, reside within a few miles of their parents. At present Mr. and Mrs. Poirier are the proud great great-grandparents of nine young children, and a short time ago the five generations of this family were all gathered together, which must surely constitute a record. To show what a healthy and prolific family this is it may be stated that the eldest son, aged 68, has had 14 children, 51 grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

In the pathological laboratories of the University of Pennsylvania an investigation, designed to discover antidotes for all kinds of snake poison, is conducted along lines suggested by Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, and the Carnegie Institute has granted an appropriation to assist the work. Many experiments are made with rattlesnakes, cobras and other poisonous reptiles, and the effects of their venom upon animals are studied. The physicians regard alcohol, taken internally, as a valuable stimulant, but not as an antidote. The most valuable remedial agent is the intermittent ligature—a band about the wounded limb which is loosened for an instant at stated intervales, thus allowing the poison to enter the system in very smal quantities. In this manner the patien is enabled gradually to overcome the effects of the poison. fects of the poison.

New Orleans is to lose its picturesque French quarter, the scene of almost as many real and literary romances as the Quartier Latin of Paris. The Suprems Court of Louisiana is now lodged in the old Spanish Cabildo, or Town Hall, but a new house is to be built for it and a solid block is being torn out for the site. The Royal Hotel, once the most splendid in the country, where a $20,000 supper was given to Henry Clay; the residence with a quaint Spanish courtyard, once the headquarters of General Jacksons of the headquarters of General Jacksons of the home of Paul Morphy, the chess player; the office in Exchange alley where Sir Henry M. Stanley worked and borrowed his name—these and thirty seven other old buildings are going or gone. By a pretty touch of Creole chivalry the Davis mansion is to be spared for a while so that the daughter of one of the old families may be married in the home of her ancestors. New Orleans, about to become a great city, thu throws aside its French and Spanish customs to deal in grain and lumber as well as cotton.
