poetry.

"Early to bed and early to rise ;" Aye note it down in your brain. For it helpeth to make the toolish wise, And uproots the weeds of pain.

Ye who are walking on thorns of care, Who sigh for a softer bower, Try what can be done in the morning sun. And make use of the early hour.

Full many a day for ever is lost By delaying its work till to-morrow; The minutes of sloth have often cost Long years of bootless sorrow.

And ye, who would win the lasting wealth Of content and peaceful power; Ye who would couple labour and health, Must begin at an early hour.

Nature herself ever shows her best Ot gems to the gaze of the lark, When the spangles of light on earth's gre breast

Put out the stars of the dark.

If we love the purest pearl of the dew, And the richest breath of the flower ; If our spirits would greet the fresh and the sweet.

Go forth at the early hour.

Oh ! pleasure and rest are more easily found. When we start through morning's gate, To sum up our figures or plough up our ground And weave out the threads of fate !

The eye looketh bright and the heart keepeth light.

And man holdeth the conqueror's power, When ready and brave he claims Time as his slave.

By the help of the early hour !

" Early to bed and early to rise," That you may have time to pray; Beneath the glorious morning skies Seek blessings for all the day.

There are many who greet the morning light. In healthful joyous glee, Who are in eternity ere 'tis night And it may be so with THEE !

The purest and best who ere trod our earth Arose ere yet it was day ; While slumbers wrapt the sons of mirth He ascends the Mount to pray.

Ere the wings of light had chased the night, He pleads with the God of love, And now as a victor, with zeal and might, He continues work his above.

And can a mother prolong her rest While the early hour glides by, And her-little group remains unblest, With an enemy ever nigh ;

And does she profess to follow him Who arose ere vet 'twas day ? Do she think it safe, in this world of sin, To sleep when she ought to pray?
