

C. M. A. IS BLAMED FOR SURPLUS IMMIGRATION

Manufacturers' Association Charged With Bringing Foreign Citizens Under False Pretenses for the Purpose of Overcrowding the Labor Market and Reducing Wages.

OTTAWA, Dec. 17.—Immigration has always been one of the chief topics of parliamentary discussion. The house on Saturday had another day with the foreigner. Before getting down to the house decided to begin its Christmas holiday on Wednesday instead of Thursday, as planned.

R. L. Borden brought up the operations of the North Atlantic Trading Company, which he said had been in receipt of $387,245 instead of three hundred thousand dollars, as reported last session. He believed that the North Atlantic Trading Company though not monopolizing the business, was getting bonuses for sending immigrants. Mr. Borden said he was daily hearing from immigrants who had been induced to come out by booking agents who claimed to be able to place them in positions in Canada and failed to do so.

One of them was named Lumsden and claimed to be acting for the Grand Trunk Railway. He had sent out one man to take a place as a weaver. The Grand Trunk said they knew nothing about the agent. The man was in Toronto, having left a good place in England and found money in Canada. Mr. Oliver said that the government had not authorized this agent and was not responsible for him. From the circular, Mr. Borden read, Mr. Oliver thought that this agent was a representative of the Manufacturers' Association. It had unsuccessfully urged that the government should use its agents to induce merchants and citizens to come to Canada. The government had been asked by an agent of the Manufacturers' Association in England to be authorized by the Canadian government to do business. The agent's name was familiar as Louis Leopold or Leopold Lumsden.

The Canadian government was now advising persons not to come to Canada until next spring unless they had means of support, as the labor market was now overstocked. He was satisfied that the immigration records of this government and the former government should be compared. The operations of the Conservatives had driven a million people out of Canada and forced the United States to enact an alien labor law. The present government had created a great flow of immigration to Canada from Europe.

would shrink before such a sacrifice. Dictatorship is no new thing in Portugal. Since 1831 every ministry has had recourse to the promulgation of laws by decree; the executive power has always encroached upon and invaded the domain of the Legislature.

I was brought to exercise dictatorship myself. I belonged to the Regenerator party of Hintze-Robert from 1894 to 1897. This state of affairs, which I do not hesitate to call abnormal, was the unfortunate product of a parliamentary system distorted and violated. It brought out the importance of this rotary system, since, in order to govern, it was necessary to dispense with Parliament. It was a deplorable situation, against which I raised my voice in the Chamber in 1893.

"The country ought not," I then said, "to remain the toy of the Regeneration and Progressives." What I wished—my programme was on broad lines—was transformation, a cleansing of parliamentary life, a really representative regime, a good administration of the public funds. In 1901 I separated from the Regenerator party, and twenty-nine deputies followed me. In 1903, at my instigation, was formed the Liberal Regenerator party. Its objects is to establish the representative regime in Portugal.

"Since 1904 I have tried with Senhor Luciano de Castro, Chief of the Progressives, to form a Liberal concentration. To this alliance I attached three conditions: the reform of the law of audit, the voting of a law of ministerial responsibility and a new electoral law abolishing the great descriptions, and substituting 'colleges' adapted to give a faithful image of the political opinions of the country. Sen. de Castro would not accept this. He wanted an election coalition; I proposed a coalition of principles. In April, 1906, I made a second attempt and succeeded. This was the foundation of what is called the 'Liberal Concentration'."

SURVEYOR-GENERAL HEARD MINING PROTESTS

Three Cases Were Taken Up at Moncton Yesterday

MONCTON, Dec. 17.—Three mining protests were taken up today before Hon. P. J. Sweeney, surveyor general of New Brunswick. Two of the cases were heard, and judgment will be given later, while the hearing in the third case was postponed.

The first examination was on a barytes property at Menziesbrook, east of Memramcook. The applicant was one Harry M. Bay, for license to work. The protest heard was one filed by B. A. Charters of Sussex, who claimed to have a one-third interest. The surveyor general examined two parties, Mr. S. S. Saito, who claimed to have a one-third interest, found out the particulars and takes time to consider it.

Another protest heard was that made by S. Cranfield, vice-president of the Mild Brook Mining and Reduction Co. The application for license to search was made by W. J. Ferguson of Preston. The Mild Brook Mining and Reduction Co. claimed that Ferguson had "jumped" their claim. The company claim to have spent a large amount of money there, some twelve thousand dollars, and claim the surveyor general should not approve the application of Mr. Ferguson, which would allow them further time to develop their property. This property is located in Albert County, Alma parish, west of Point Wolfe, on the Bay of Fundy.

The third case is an application also by Mr. S. Cranfield, for license to search one square mile of land previously under license to Leonard Martin, of Alma. This license to work had expired by limit of time, but the previous license claims that he has spent a large amount of money in developing. Consequently the application of Mr. Cranfield should not be considered. This case has been postponed by the Surveyor General on the application of Mr. Martin, and will be taken up at a later date.

T. G. Loggie, chief draftsman of the Crown Lands Department, and who also has charge of the Mining Bureau under the Surveyor General, was in the city in connection with the hearings.

SURVEYING OVER THE PROPOSED RAILWAY THROUGH CHATHAM

CHATHAM, Dec. 17.—Messrs. Lawrence and McCluskey of Moncton and McGrath of Halifax came into town last week to survey over the Board of Trade's proposed route of the railway through this town.

The party expected to finish its preliminary work last night and was then engaged in the vicinity of Nelson. The board's idea was to have the present line diverted at Nelson and follow the river front and pass through this town somewhere between Wellington street and Howard street.

The opinion of the surveyors was that if the line were brought down the proposed route it would pass back of the pumping station, back of the alms house and come out just below the exhibition building, where the most suitable site for the station is to be found. Then the line would strike towards the field near the Grammar School and join the old road about half a mile beyond the present station.

Mr. McCluskey left on Saturday and Mr. Lawrence and Mr. McGrath continued the work yesterday. To provide the necessary connection it will be necessary to run spurs from the main line to the various sites.

COMPROMISE IN HAYDEN-VON MOLTKE CASE NOT UNLIKELY

BERLIN, Dec. 17.—A compromise in the Hayden-Von Moltke case is under consideration. Yesterday the editor of Maximilian Harden, editor of Die Zukunft, who brought a series of sweeping accusations against Count Kuno Von Moltke, was postponed, owing to the illness of the defendant. It became known also that several others most closely identified with the case are suffering greatly from the nervous strain brought about by developments in the previous trial, and within the last twenty-four hours every effort has been made to effect a compromise on the grounds that the health of the principals has been shattered, and that the highest interests of state render further controversy inadvisable.
