Men DO Read Advertisements

There has been some lively discussion on this subject lately, and at a dinner of advertising men in one of the larger cities recently a prominent advertiser rose and asserted that "after all, very few men read advertisements." "You are absolutely wrong," retorted another advertising man, the manager of advertising in a department store. "We had a sale of shirts one day last week that was the most successful in the history of our business. 99 per cent of those who came in and bought were men. They came in direct response to our newspaper advertisement." Everywhere in every station of life men find interest in advertising. It may not be clothing, shoes or hats; but it may be something that relates to real estate, banking, the stock market, to automobiles—to any of the thou-sand and one things that constantly form the subject of wide-awake adver-
