The announcement has been made of the engagement of Prince George of Battenberg and Countess Nada Torby. It sounds a more ideal arrangement than most of the marriages projected by "Princesses of War" paths. Prince George is a sailor like his father, an Englishman to the core of his heart, and has taken part in one of the few naval engagements of the war. He is manly and modest, and liked by all who know him; and Countess Nada Torby, like her sister, enjoys an enormous popularity. Between them the young people are related to practically every Royal family in Europe.

Arrangements are being made for an entertainment for the benefit of Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught's "Prisoners of War" fund, to be held at the Ritz-Carlton on Saturday evening, May 27th. Lorne McElhannon, Mrs. Allan MacKenzie, Mrs. Ernest Stuart, Mrs. Melville Davis and Mrs. Mitchell-Henry.

The marriage is announced in London of Miss Muriel Dodd, champion lady golfer in Canada, to Captain MacBeth. Mrs. MacBeth won the championship in 1913, and as no tournaments have been held since, she still retains the title. The charming bride will be accompanied by her husband's sword. Golfers throughout Canada will join in hearty congratulations.

A delightful entertainment was given at the Hotel Biltmore, New York, on Thursday evening in aid of the Allies Hospitals Relief Commission, Lady Borden being the patroness. Many prominent actors and actresses gave their services and an excellent and varied program was given, at the close of which dancing was the order of the day. The affair was one of the most successful held recently and a large sum was realized for this most worthy cause.

One of the most interesting and successful of the charitable functions given in New York this season was the entertainment at the Ritz-Carlton on Wednesday evening of this week for the benefit of the Permanent Blind Relief War Fund in aid of the British, French and Belgian soldiers. Many dinners preceded it and many more supper parties followed. Sir Herbert Tree and his daughter, Miss Iris Tree and Lady de Bathe all contributed to the program. HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W.S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

THE OPEN SEASON for the house fly is at hand. Flies are the filthiest and one of the most dangerous enemies of man. Every summer they kill more people in Ontario than are killed during the entire year by murderers, lightning storms, mad dogs, angry bulls, street and railway cars, and motors. How do they do it? By carrying the germs of typhoid fever, dysentery, infant diarrhoea, tuberculosis, and many other diseases to our food. How could the fly with its disgusting habits do otherwise than carry disease? The frequenter of every fifth this insect boldly invades our homes, and with a nonchalant air and impudence unequalled by anything or anyone, he roams about among the daintiest dishes, wiping his dirty feet wherever he alights. Flies breed chiefly in manure piles and lay about 120 eggs at a time. If stable manure is not convenient, the female fly lays her eggs in garbage, human excrement, decaying vegetable matter, rubbish, or any available filth. In warm weather the eggs become full grown flies in from eight to ten days. Perhaps some of you have seen the Provincial Board of Health's moving picture film illustrating the growth of the fly. If you have not already done so you may see this interesting film at the next Canadian National Exhibition in the Ontario Health Exhibit.

The fly is a great feeder. He has an enormous appetite. When full grown his first impulse is to obtain a square meal. He is not particular about the quality of food he eats. It may be manure, or filth of any kind. Then he starts out to visit the immediate neighborhood. A conveniently open kitchen window attracts him, and soon he is revelling in the sweets of the kitchen. If screened windows prevent his entry to the house he is latent upon he takes a few meals from the garbage pail or spittoon. If there is plenty of food near their breeding places flies may travel but short distances. If, however, the supply in the immediate neighborhood is scanty they travel considerable distances, even half a mile or more.

We used to regard the fly simply as a pest, an enemy to one's rest and comfort. This is particularly so when one desires to sleep, read, or remain quiet in his presence. When we began to study his breeding places, habits of life, and the possibility of his carrying nauseating filth and disease on his feet and legs from stables and privies to our food, the fly assumed much more importance and was soon recognized as a danger to one's health. Flies are now known to carry many diseases. Flies cannot breed without filth, and their number is a measure of the filth about a place. They serve as a perpetual tormenting disagreeable reminder of our own filth, and they serve to teach us a lesson in cleanliness.

To solve the fly problem is simply to remove, destroy, or screen all manure and other filth in the community. Manure should not be allowed to remain about stables for a longer period than four or five days. It should always be kept in a tight-fitting box so that flies cannot reach it. In cities, towns, and villages this is the law. It is no great hardship for the man who keeps a horse or a cow to construct such a box, especially since it is in his own and his neighbor's interest from the point of view of health and comfort that he should do so. People fail to keep their premises clean—First, because they don't know any better. After such people read this, that excuse is removed. There are not many of this class, but those who belong to it are guilty of criminal negligence, and the police court is their proper destination. Third, they don't think it worth while unless their neighbors do the same thing. Co-operation and example is the way to deal with these. Boys and girls should learn of the habits and danger of flies early in life. It is for them particularly that these lines are written. Boys and girls are the best asset of the Nation, especially if they are well trained and educated. It is to them that the health officer looks for the future prevention of disease. So to the boys and girls I say: learn habits of cleanliness of every kind. You will be the better of it.
