

Childs Play Wash-day

Surprise Soap

cleanses so easily that wash day is like child's play.

There is nothing in it but pure Soap.

It cannot injure the clothes and gives the sweetest cleanest results. To wash the Surprise way.

Read the directions on the wrapper.

You can use Surprise in any and every way.

We Teach Illustrating.

YOU may have some talent for this line of work but you have been handicapped from perfecting yourself in the art.

You Can Do it Now.

YOUR TERMS ARE OURS.

An Arts and Crafts outfit value at $12 Given Free with course to students enrolling in March.

The International Correspondence Schools, Scranton.

Canada Office, 413 Temple Building, Toronto. W. W. SNYDER, Local Rep., Box 547, Chatham, Ont.

BAKING

Give your wife a chance and she'll bake bread like that mother used to make.

For rolls and biscuits—that require to be baked quickly there's nothing like Gas.

THE CHATHAM GAS CO Limited.

King St. Phone 81

TO OUR CUSTOMERS.

We have just put in, at great expense, a WONDERFUL MACHINE, heated by steam, work only passing through the rollers once; the result—WORK IS EASIER, WILL NOT BREAK, and will last much longer than when ironed by the old method, heated by gas, which has to pass through the rollers eight times.

P.S.—We have also added a newly invented machine to Iron the edges of Collars and Cuffs.

The Canadian Steam Laundry Co. of Ontario, Limited.

London, Hamilton and Toronto.

The Chatham Loan and Savings' Co.

CAPITAL, $1,000,000.

INCORPORATED A. D. 1881.

Money to Lend on Mortgages.

Apply personally and secure best rates and expenses. Deposits of $1 and up wards received and interest allowed.

Debentures issued for three, four or five years with interest. Coupons payable half yearly. Executors and Trustees authorized by Act of Parliament to invest Trust Funds in the Debentures of this Company.

S. F. GARDNER, Manager

Chatham, November 30, 1903.

A Good, Stiff Argument

for our laundry work can be put up on just one article—the stiff bosom shirt. If there is any one that launders these as well as we do they are unknown to us. There certainly is no one who does the work any better than we.

CHATHAM STEAM LAUNDRY

Perfect finish is not the only thing sought here. Care is taken that the collar band is not stretched out of shape or made uneven or the bosoms of open front shirts ironed so buttonholes do not come opposite. We do all these things right.

CHATHAM STEAM LAUNDRY

Sixth St. near Fire Hall, Phone 199

So long as clothes are worn, women will have something to talk about and the men something to worry over.

GLASS GLASS, Chatham Branch.

LINKS WITH THE PAST

OLD CLERKENWELL'S INTERESTING VESTIGES OF OLDEN TIME.

The Theatrical Representations Founded Upon Scriptural Subjects—An English Branch of Knights of St. John of Jerusalem Established There as Early as 1100—Red Lion Street to Be Rebuilt—Spirit of Fanny Kemp.

Few parishes possess more interesting vestiges of olden time than Clerkenwell. It derived its name from a spring on the western side of the green called Clerk's Well, embracing the antique form of the plural. Thither went the London parish clerks, who annually used to exhibit theatrical representations founded on Scriptural subjects.

Yet probably long before parish clerks acted on their wooden stage outside Clerkenwell, green events had taken place in the district, giving it unique interest in ecclesiastical and political history. The circumstance leading to such importance was the settlement in the locality of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem. They were founded in the Holy Land in the eleventh century. About the year 1100 an English branch was established in Clerkenwell, and afterwards its adherents erected a sumptuous pile of buildings, including a beautiful church. It was consecrated in March, 1185, by Heracles, titular Patriarch of Jerusalem. Devastation of the Priory of St. John set in with the Reformation; but strange to say there are vestiges of it remaining in wonderful preservation. They chiefly consist of the walls of the present church of St. John and its noble crypt, and St. John's gate. Canadian visitors desirous of full information about these historic monuments should consult the illustrated guide of "The Remains of the Ancient Priory and the present parish church of St. John at Clerkenwell," by the Rev. T. W. Wood, rector, and Mr. H. W. Fincham, one of his churchwardens.

St. John's gate is one of the picturesque landmarks of old London. The south postern of the Priory, it was erected in 1504 by Prior Decimus, replacing an earlier gate. After secularization the gate passed through many vicissitudes. In the eighteenth century St. John's gate was the printing and publishing office of Edward Cave, who issued The Value of a Character.

What shall a man ask in exchange for his character—the one asset that is greater than all other assets? In every walk of life the man who is sought after is the honest man. To him all things are possible. Not only his work, but in every branch of the manifold activities of business and of daily life, the strictly honest man is indispensable. He may have many good points, but unimpeachable integrity is his great qualification. Confidence is the corner-stone of business. Reputation is the superstructure, and it can be raised only on a well grounded foundation.

But the worst of all fates is the slavery of the dishonest. One false step may have been taken, and regretted so soon as taken. How often does it happen, however, that in taking that step a young man places himself within the power of another who is older in crime and has less scruples? Then exposure is threatened, and there are other betrayals of trust. Thus in the end the unwary become the slaves of those who are lying in wait to gild them by dishonesty and profit by their folly. In all such cases, and they are numerous, the bulk of the profit, if indeed it can be called profit, goes to the more crafty and experienced partner.

Whether the wrong is immediately detected or not, the greatest penalty paid for the crime is the loss of self-respect. A man may be misjudged by his fellows, he may pass as genuine even when he is really counterfeit, but in his own unerring consciousness he is known as he really is. What is to be compared in mere dollars, or their equivalent, to the ability to look the world unflinchingly in the face and to fear none? The folly of the thief who hopes to escape detection is past understanding. He is his own devil, his own judge and his own jailer. He has ever so bold, there are nameless terrors for him on every street corner. Every footstep alarms him. Every shadow is a felon.

Better reasons for unvarying integrity might be advanced. There is the eternal command, and also the altruistic aspect of the question. But the point that is emphasized by daily experience, repeated over and over again, is that a life that is not steady and guided by an honest purpose is doomed to become a worthless wreck, and that character is the pure gold coin of business life, that nothing can compensate for the sacrifice of reputation, freedom and self-respect.

This means, of course, as the old proverb has it, that honesty is the best policy. It were better that men were honest for honesty's sake, but whether that suffices or not, it is always well to remember that honesty is the watchword of business success.

Young men fall because they fail to weigh in the balance the ultimate cost of the first wrong step. They fall because they mistake the real source of happiness in life, and strive to acquire that which is not so precious as good reputation, with its accompanying pleasures—peace of mind and the confidence of their fellow-men. Money is not wealth. The greatest assets are a clear conscience and a good character. These conceded, all that a man can reasonably desire, certainly more than can be dishonestly acquired, is sure to follow. The prohibition of covetousness is not a meaningless law. He who is content with what he has or what he honestly earns is avoiding the temptation, and is preparing for riches which no man can dispute, and which he can enjoy as long as life lasts.

Value of a Character.

What shall a man ask in exchange for his character—the one asset that is greater than all other assets? In every walk of life the man who is sought after is the honest man. To him all things are possible. Not only his work, but in every branch of the manifold activities of business and of daily life, the strictly honest man is indispensable. He may have many good points, but unimpeachable integrity is his great qualification. Confidence is the corner-stone of business. Reputation is the superstructure, and it can be raised only on a well grounded foundation.

But the worst of all fates is the slavery of the dishonest. One false step may have been taken, and regretted so soon as taken. How often does it happen, however, that in taking that step a young man places himself within the power of another who is older in crime and has less scruples? Then exposure is threatened, and there are other betrayals of trust. Thus in the end the unwary become the slaves of those who are lying in wait to gild them by dishonesty and profit by their folly. In all such cases, and they are numerous, the bulk of the profit, if indeed it can be called profit, goes to the more crafty and experienced partner.

Whether the wrong is immediately detected or not, the greatest penalty paid for the crime is the loss of self-respect. A man may be misjudged by his fellows, he may pass as genuine even when he is really counterfeit, but in his own unerring consciousness he is known as he really is. What is to be compared in mere dollars, or their equivalent, to the ability to look the world unflinchingly in the face and to fear none? The folly of the thief who hopes to escape detection is past understanding. He is his own devil, his own judge and his own jailer. He has ever so bold, there are nameless terrors for him on every street corner. Every footstep alarms him. Every shadow is a felon.

Better reasons for unvarying integrity might be advanced. There is the eternal command, and also the altruistic aspect of the question. But the point that is emphasized by daily experience, repeated over and over again, is that a life that is not steady and guided by an honest purpose is doomed to become a worthless wreck, and that character is the pure gold coin of business life, that nothing can compensate for the sacrifice of reputation, freedom and self-respect.

This means, of course, as the old proverb has it, that honesty is the best policy. It were better that men were honest for honesty's sake, but whether that suffices or not, it is always well to remember that honesty is the watchword of business success.

Young men fall because they fail to weigh in the balance the ultimate cost of the first wrong step. They fall because they mistake the real source of happiness in life, and strive to acquire that which is not so precious as good reputation, with its accompanying pleasures—peace of mind and the confidence of their fellow-men. Money is not wealth. The greatest assets are a clear conscience and a good character. These conceded, all that a man can reasonably desire, certainly more than can be dishonestly acquired, is sure to follow. The prohibition of covetousness is not a meaningless law. He who is content with what he has or what he honestly earns is avoiding the temptation, and is preparing for riches which no man can dispute, and which he can enjoy as long as life lasts.

Value of a Character.

What shall a man ask in exchange for his character—the one asset that is greater than all other assets? In every walk of life the man who is sought after is the honest man. To him all things are possible. Not only his work, but in every branch of the manifold activities of business and of daily life, the strictly honest man is indispensable. He may have many good points, but unimpeachable integrity is his great qualification. Confidence is the corner-stone of business. Reputation is the superstructure, and it can be raised only on a well grounded foundation.

But the worst of all fates is the slavery of the dishonest. One false step may have been taken, and regretted so soon as taken. How often does it happen, however, that in taking that step a young man places himself within the power of another who is older in crime and has less scruples? Then exposure is threatened, and there are other betrayals of trust. Thus in the end the unwary become the slaves of those who are lying in wait to gild them by dishonesty and profit by their folly. In all such cases, and they are numerous, the bulk of the profit, if indeed it can be called profit, goes to the more crafty and experienced partner.

Whether the wrong is immediately detected or not, the greatest penalty paid for the crime is the loss of self-respect. A man may be misjudged by his fellows, he may pass as genuine even when he is really counterfeit, but in his own unerring consciousness he is known as he really is. What is to be compared in mere dollars, or their equivalent, to the ability to look the world unflinchingly in the face and to fear none? The folly of the thief who hopes to escape detection is past understanding. He is his own devil, his own judge and his own jailer. He has ever so bold, there are nameless terrors for him on every street corner. Every footstep alarms him. Every shadow is a felon.

Better reasons for unvarying integrity might be advanced. There is the eternal command, and also the altruistic aspect of the question. But the point that is emphasized by daily experience, repeated over and over again, is that a life that is not steady and guided by an honest purpose is doomed to become a worthless wreck, and that character is the pure gold coin of business life, that nothing can compensate for the sacrifice of reputation, freedom and self-respect.

This means, of course, as the old proverb has it, that honesty is the best policy. It were better that men were honest for honesty's sake, but whether that suffices or not, it is always well to remember that honesty is the watchword of business success.

Young men fall because they fail to weigh in the balance the ultimate cost of the first wrong step. They fall because they mistake the real source of happiness in life, and strive to acquire that which is not so precious as good reputation, with its accompanying pleasures—peace of mind and the confidence of their fellow-men. Money is not wealth. The greatest assets are a clear conscience and a good character. These conceded, all that a man can reasonably desire, certainly more than can be dishonestly acquired, is sure to follow. The prohibition of covetousness is not a meaningless law. He who is content with what he has or what he honestly earns is avoiding the temptation, and is preparing for riches which no man can dispute, and which he can enjoy as long as life lasts.

THE INEVITABLE CHOICE.

Starting of the Ways as Illustrated in the Downfall of Young Harold Webster, of Toronto.

Gold and diamonds; pearls and precious stones. Easy to conceal, readily converted into cash. Will he become a thief for their sake, revel for a brief time in unwonted affluence, and ever afterwards hate himself for his folly, or will he win respect, confidence, and an enviable reputation by adhering to the principles of strict integrity?

This is the question to which young Harold Webster, the Ellis jewelry pilferer, gave the wrong answer, says The Toronto Mail and Empire. His case is typical of many. In all lives the choice must sooner or later be made. The bait is not always the same, but the hook is ever there. It is worth while considering, from a purely business standpoint, what it costs to be caught by the snare, and what it means to avoid it.

Debt and Credit Account.

There is no greater fallacy than to suppose that anything in this world can be obtained for nothing. If it is earned one gives his labor. If it is bestowed as a gift one assumes an obligation which he will be bound to discharge. If it is stolen, he is of great value or small, the highest possible price of all is paid. The thief gives his character in exchange for his booty. That character may not be worth much in the later stages, but at the outset it is a priceless possession, the very best that any man has to give—better, indeed, than life itself. Let us, therefore, place on one side of the account a man's character, his future life, his life's earnings, and, on the other side of the account, whatever the circumstances of the moment may place within his power. This, no doubt, is lowest in the plane on which the subject may be discussed, but it does not prevent one from rising to higher considerations. It enables one to declare with gained certainty that ill-gotten gains demand a sacrifice representing in hard cash ten times, a hundred times, nay, a thousand times, their apparent value.

Value of a Character.

What shall a man ask in exchange for his character—the one asset that is greater than all other assets? In every walk of life the man who is sought after is the honest man. To him all things are possible. Not only his work, but in every branch of the manifold activities of business and of daily life, the strictly honest man is indispensable. He may have many good points, but unimpeachable integrity is his great qualification. Confidence is the corner-stone of business. Reputation is the superstructure, and it can be raised only on a well grounded foundation.

But the worst of all fates is the slavery of the dishonest. One false step may have been taken, and regretted so soon as taken. How often does it happen, however, that in taking that step a young man places himself within the power of another who is older in crime and has less scruples? Then exposure is threatened, and there are other betrayals of trust. Thus in the end the unwary become the slaves of those who are lying in wait to gild them by dishonesty and profit by their folly. In all such cases, and they are numerous, the bulk of the profit, if indeed it can be called profit, goes to the more crafty and experienced partner.

Whether the wrong is immediately detected or not, the greatest penalty paid for the crime is the loss of self-respect. A man may be misjudged by his fellows, he may pass as genuine even when he is really counterfeit, but in his own unerring consciousness he is known as he really is. What is to be compared in mere dollars, or their equivalent, to the ability to look the world unflinchingly in the face and to fear none? The folly of the thief who hopes to escape detection is past understanding. He is his own devil, his own judge and his own jailer. He has ever so bold, there are nameless terrors for him on every street corner. Every footstep alarms him. Every shadow is a felon.

Better reasons for unvarying integrity might be advanced. There is the eternal command, and also the altruistic aspect of the question. But the point that is emphasized by daily experience, repeated over and over again, is that a life that is not steady and guided by an honest purpose is doomed to become a worthless wreck, and that character is the pure gold coin of business life, that nothing can compensate for the sacrifice of reputation, freedom and self-respect.

This means, of course, as the old proverb has it, that honesty is the best policy. It were better that men were honest for honesty's sake, but whether that suffices or not, it is always well to remember that honesty is the watchword of business success.

Young men fall because they fail to weigh in the balance the ultimate cost of the first wrong step. They fall because they mistake the real source of happiness in life, and strive to acquire that which is not so precious as good reputation, with its accompanying pleasures—peace of mind and the confidence of their fellow-men. Money is not wealth. The greatest assets are a clear conscience and a good character. These conceded, all that a man can reasonably desire, certainly more than can be dishonestly acquired, is sure to follow. The prohibition of covetousness is not a meaningless law. He who is content with what he has or what he honestly earns is avoiding the temptation, and is preparing for riches which no man can dispute, and which he can enjoy as long as life lasts.

Value of a Character.

What shall a man ask in exchange for his character—the one asset that is greater than all other assets? In every walk of life the man who is sought after is the honest man. To him all things are possible. Not only his work, but in every branch of the manifold activities of business and of daily life, the strictly honest man is indispensable. He may have many good points, but unimpeachable integrity is his great qualification. Confidence is the corner-stone of business. Reputation is the superstructure, and it can be raised only on a well grounded foundation.

But the worst of all fates is the slavery of the dishonest. One false step may have been taken, and regretted so soon as taken. How often does it happen, however, that in taking that step a young man places himself within the power of another who is older in crime and has less scruples? Then exposure is threatened, and there are other betrayals of trust. Thus in the end the unwary become the slaves of those who are lying in wait to gild them by dishonesty and profit by their folly. In all such cases, and they are numerous, the bulk of the profit, if indeed it can be called profit, goes to the more crafty and experienced partner.

Whether the wrong is immediately detected or not, the greatest penalty paid for the crime is the loss of self-respect. A man may be misjudged by his fellows, he may pass as genuine even when he is really counterfeit, but in his own unerring consciousness he is known as he really is. What is to be compared in mere dollars, or their equivalent, to the ability to look the world unflinchingly in the face and to fear none? The folly of the thief who hopes to escape detection is past understanding. He is his own devil, his own judge and his own jailer. He has ever so bold, there are nameless terrors for him on every street corner. Every footstep alarms him. Every shadow is a felon.

Better reasons for unvarying integrity might be advanced. There is the eternal command, and also the altruistic aspect of the question. But the point that is emphasized by daily experience, repeated over and over again, is that a life that is not steady and guided by an honest purpose is doomed to become a worthless wreck, and that character is the pure gold coin of business life, that nothing can compensate for the sacrifice of reputation, freedom and self-respect.

This means, of course, as the old proverb has it, that honesty is the best policy. It were better that men were honest for honesty's sake, but whether that suffices or not, it is always well to remember that honesty is the watchword of business success.

Young men fall because they fail to weigh in the balance the ultimate cost of the first wrong step. They fall because they mistake the real source of happiness in life, and strive to acquire that which is not so precious as good reputation, with its accompanying pleasures—peace of mind and the confidence of their fellow-men. Money is not wealth. The greatest assets are a clear conscience and a good character. These conceded, all that a man can reasonably desire, certainly more than can be dishonestly acquired, is sure to follow. The prohibition of covetousness is not a meaningless law. He who is content with what he has or what he honestly earns is avoiding the temptation, and is preparing for riches which no man can dispute, and which he can enjoy as long as life lasts.

Value of a Character.

What shall a man ask in exchange for his character—the one asset that is greater than all other assets? In every walk of life the man who is sought after is the honest man. To him all things are possible. Not only his work, but in every branch of the manifold activities of business and of daily life, the strictly honest man is indispensable. He may have many good points, but unimpeachable integrity is his great qualification. Confidence is the corner-stone of business. Reputation is the superstructure, and it can be raised only on a well grounded foundation.

FORWARD

is the watchword of the "Progress" tailors.

Create—develop—perfect.

Originate—improve—better the present best.

"PROGRESS" CLOTHING

of to-day is the result of 12 years of progress. And every "Progress" Brand garment reflects this forwardness—this perfection.

Sold by Leading Clothiers Throughout Canada.

Progress Brand Clothing may be had from C. AUSIN & CO, Market Square Corner King St

Lords and Commons. The house of lords is 61 by 45 feet, the house of commons a trifle smaller.

Austrian Marriage Laws. The Austrian marriage laws are very severe. They prohibit marriages between Christians and Jews and between Christians and infidels. A marriage between a Protestant woman and a man who said he had no particular creed was annulled by the supreme court.

TONSILLITIS IS GOING AROUND

And everybody is wondering what to do. Here is a simple cure. Use a gargle of Nervilleine and water as recommended in the directions, and rub your throat and chest vigorously with Nervilleine. This has been tested and proved successful a thousand times. Nervilleine is a specific for tonsillitis and in fact we know of nothing half so good for breaking up colds, curing tight chest and all muscular pains. Try a bottle of Nervilleine; price 25c.

Transformation of a Worm. In China there is a kind of worm that regularly falls a prey to a species of parasitic fungus. In the course of time this fungus pervades the poor worm's entire anatomical structure, converting him into a woody fiber, in which state he is esteemed as being a valuable medicine.

Rubber Trees. The milk of the rubber tree contains 56 per cent of water and 44 per cent of rubber.

JUST WHAT YOU NEED.

Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets.

When you feel dull after eating. When you have an appetite. When you have a bad taste in the mouth. When your liver is torpid. When your bowels are constipated. When you have a headache. When you feel bilious. They will improve your appetite, cleanse and invigorate your stomach, and regulate your liver and bowels. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by All Druggists.

Time flies and cannot be made to tarry, although a good many people think they keep Lent.

Ababy is often less fractious when it is up in arms.

Rossway, Jan'y 28th, 1901.

C. C. RICHARDS & CO.

Dear Sirs.—This fall I got thrown on a fence and hurt my chest very bad so I could not work and it hurt me to breathe. I tried all kinds of Liniments and they did me no good. One bottle of MINARD'S LINIMENT warmed on flannels and applied on my breast cured me completely.

C. H. COSSEBOOM.

Rossway, Digby Co., N. S.

Many women consider low necks highly respectable.

When a horse picks up a nail in his foot what does the driver do? Does he whip the limping, lagging animal and force him along? Not unless he wants to ruin the horse. At the first sign of lameness he jumps down, examines the foot and carefully removes the cause of the lameness. What is called "weak stomach" is like the lameness of the horse, only to be cured by removing the cause of the trouble. If you stimulate the stomach with "whiskey medicines" you keep it going, but every day the condition is growing worse. A few doses sometimes of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will put the disordered stomach and its allied organs of digestion and nutrition in perfect condition. Nine-tenths of the ailments of the human system originate in diseases of the stomach. It always helps. It almost always cures. To cure constipation use Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They're sure.

When a woman turns back to look at another woman it is not hard to guess the reason.

Lever's Y-Z (Wool Brand) Disinfectant Soap Powder is a boon to any home. It disinfects and cleans at the same time.

Like comfortable bridges, some people are easily overcome.

WANTED

AGENTS WANTED—$2.50 day. Address Cook, per, London, Ont.

WANTED—Good second cook, at once, also good dining room girl, at Hotel Merrill.

GIRL WANTED—For general housework, in a small family. Mrs. G. A. Witherspoon, Wellington St. West.

WANTED—By young lady of some experience, position as assistant bookkeeper or stenographer. Apply Box 25 Planet.

WANTED—A maid to do general housework. Good cook preferred. Liberal wages. No washing. Apply without delay, to Mrs. Shannon, at late residence of Mr. S. J. Sutherland, Victoria Ave.

WANTED—Men wanted to learn barber trade; only eight weeks required by our system of constant practice; tools furnished; diploma given. Full tuition $25. Call on write, Detroit Barber College, 48 Woodward avenue, Detroit, Mich.

FOR SALE OR TO RENT.

HORSE FOR SALE—Good work horse for sale cheap. Apply to or address G. C. Scott, Cedar Springs.

FOR SALE—House and two lots, lots 124 and 127, on Sandys street, which survey, acquire of J. J. Labute, on premises.

FARM TO SELL OR RENT—A fruit and tobacco farm on Lake Erie, near Cedar Springs, known as the Taylor property. Terms easy. R. J. Gardiner, Chatham, Ont.

FARM FOR RENT—1-2 miles from city, 75 acres, good house and buildings, good water; under good state of cultivation. W. G. Arnold, Richmond street.

FOR SALE—The House and Lot at present occupied by the undersigned on Stanley Ave. The house has all the modern improvements, and the lot is 52x208 feet. Apply on the premises or to T. K. MacKeand, Registry Office.

HOUSE AND THREE LOTS FOR SALE—On Poplar and Baldwin St., being composed of lots No. 2, Sub. 24. The house has a brick foundation, good cellar and is within a short distance of Head street; will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment. Apply to Chas. Torry, Head street, or address Chatham, P. O.

FARM FOR SALE—North east half of lot 16, Front concession, Township of Huron, 128 acres. All cleared, clay loam, two good sized frame houses. Large frame barn and cattle shed; stable and drive-barn combined; granary and implement house. Buildings all in good repair; about five acres of orchard; artesian well, windmill and pump; three other wells. Price $8,000.00. Apply on the premises to Mrs. John J. Walrath, or to W. F. Smith, barrister and solicitor, Chatham, Ont.

CHATHAM FARMERS' HOUSE

Opposite the market.

25 well ventilated rooms. Weekly or table boarders. Special rates. $1 per day

J. W. MILES, Proprietor.

FOR SALE

Frame dwelling on Lorne Avenue, containing parlor, dining-room, bed room, kitchen, pantry, summer kitchen and woodshed, and three bedrooms and a hall upstairs. This building is as good as new. Price $1025.00 if sold at once. Apply to Smith & Smith, Real Estate Agents.

FOR SALE

Buff Plymouth Rock, the Overbaugh Strain, a few young stock for sale. Also eggs in season. $1.50 and $1.00 per setting.

RALPH McCUBBIN.

BEDFORD STREET POULTRY YARD

NOTICE

If Anna Bartley, Robt. Bartley or Robt. Henderson will apply at this office they will hear of something to their advantage.

Minard's Liniment is used by Physicians.