Pushthrough Notes.

Rev. Mr. Courage paid a short visit here during the week. We hope soon to have him with us, as the Parsonage is to be built during the summer. Coronation Day being very stormy the proposed Sunday School picnic had to be postponed until Friday, the 23rd.

A half holiday was given the employees of one of the mercantile firms here.

At night a grand display of fireworks was very much enjoyed by the young men. A soup supper at 10 o'clock was enjoyed by a few of the male sex.

On Friday the picnic took place in the schoolroom. During the afternoon the children enjoyed themselves with games and races for prizes given by friends. Tea was then served to all present, and the young ladies had quite a busy time. At night the young men gave a grand display of fireworks, which was very enjoyable. At 10 o'clock all assembled in the schoolroom, and the singing of the National Anthem brought the evening to a close, and every one was pleased with the manner in which they spent the evening. Many thanks to the kind ladies, who did their best to make every one feel as comfortable as possible. All agree that it was one of the best picnics that ever was held in Pushthrough.—Com.

The Ladies of St. John's May Now Grow Beautiful Hair.

McMurdo & Co. backed up by the manufacturers of SALVIA, the Great Hair Grower, guarantee it to grow hair.

SALVIA destroys Dandruff in ten days. The roots of the hair is so nourished and fed that a new crop of hair springs up, to the amazement and delight of the user. The hair is made soft and fluffy. Like all American preparations SALVIA is daintily perfumed. It is hard to find an actress who does not use SALVIA continually. A large bottle for 50c.

Fatal Landslide.

Inspector General Sullivan yesterday received a letter from Constable (ardiner, of Harbor Breton, in which he tells of a frightful accident which occurred at Miller's Passage, near the bar at that place on the night of Friday, the 16th inst. Heavy rain which occurred during a thunderstorm loosened up the earth near the residence of a man named Richley. The ends of the house were driven in by a landslide and the structure badly wrecked. The inmates who were awakened from the sleep, all escaped except a 14 months old baby which was in its cot. The little one was killed in the accident, and the child's body, terribly bruised, was found later having being carried a considerable distance away.

Boy Drowned.

DORY CAPSIZED—FATHER SAVED
Special Evening Telegram.

MARYSTOWN, June 28. James Brushett and son, Michael, of Little Bay, were returning from the fishing grounds this morning when a squall of wind off Cronsey struck the dory and capsized her and left the two struggling in the water. Both of them clung to the dory for a while, but the boy, aged 14, lost his grasp and becoming exhausted, sank. The old man was nearly gone when rescued by Aleck Stapleton and Jas. Smyth. All the fishermen from Tite's Cove went out with jiggers and recovered the body. No fish or caplin from Lamaline to Paradise. Twenty sail of local and Lunenburg bankers left Jean de Bay for Placentia this morning in search of caplin. Fishery on the shore a total failure. Cape St. Mary's fairly good.

A 'Cascaret' Makes You Feel Tip-Top.

No need of days when you are not at your best—no need of Headache, Biliousness, Dizziness or Bad Stomach.

Most of our dull days are due to inactive bowels. Nearly all of our minor ills could be avoided by a little candy Cascaret. Also, half of our greater ills. Isn't it foolish to suffer when there is such a pleasant way to avoid it?

Cascarets save the hours. They save the time that we waste if we are not at our best. They bring good cheer. For the blue and ill temper rarely occur when the bowels are properly helped. They make the breath sweet, the complexion clear, the eyes bright. All this for ten cents per week.

In the old days people let matters run until they needed a large dose of physic. Then they took something severe—like castor oil, salts or cathartics. That meant abuse to the bowels. These are the days of the gentle and natural—of Cascarets. Carry a 10 cent box always with you. For the right way to take them is one at a time—just as soon as you need it.

Cricket Match.

The married men defeated the single men by a score of 92 to 70 in the match yesterday at St. George's Field. In the first innings the best score, 22, was made by W. J. Donnelly for the married men. The next best was that of P. Berrigan of the same team, who made 18; J. S. Munn, 16, and P. Wallace, 11. The leading score among the bachelors was made by J. J. Grieve, viz., 15. J. Foley came next with a score of 10. In the second innings N. Alderice put up the leading score of 26 before he fell to Dickenson's bowling, and R. F. Goodridge carried out his bat with 20 to his credit. The day was an ideal one for a cricket match. The gathering was, however, small when compared to the number that used to attend games between the married and single men in the olden times. The bowling of Dickenson and Munn was full of promise and delighted the heart of our friend, P. J. Myler. Berrigan's wicket keeping was a fine one of old times, and he showed that he has not yet forgotten his business. The first innings decided the match. The second innings was played out just for the sake of the game.

Indigestion & Dyspepsia

In all its Forms can be Cured.

It is quite a daily occurrence to hear persons say: Oh, what a feeling of distress I have after meals, fullness of the stomach, heaviness and heart-ache, I feel too tired to do anything. I have no heart to exert myself and at times I care for nothing. I often have a pain in the pit of my stomach, no appetite, my heart beats rapidly on the slightest exertion. I feel just as tired when rising in the morning as when retiring to bed. My sleep is often disturbed, and I often awake with a sense of suffocation and a difficulty of again going to sleep. I have to be careful of what I eat, and my life seems a veritable burden.

Now, it seems a shame and a pity for persons to be suffering like that when it is in their power to get cured by taking a Bottle of Dr. Stafford's Prescription A. A sure cure for persons afflicted with stomach troubles. It can be obtained at

DR. F. STAFFORD & SON,

Coronation Blunders.

The Crown Has Been Dropped and Thieves Have Carried Off the Banqueting Plate.

Such a gigantic pageant as a Coronation requires an incredible amount of organisation, and the wonder is not that an occasional hitch occurs, but that, as a rule, the great ceremonial goes off so well as it does.

The Coronation of the late King Edward was a model in this respect. Indeed, the last Coronation at which any accident worth mentioning happened was that of George IV.

Upon the Lord High Steward, the Marquis of Anglesey, devolved the task of carrying the crown to the altar, before the Archbishop placed it upon the King's head. Apparently he miscalculated its weight, for it slipped from his hands.

Everyone who saw gasped with dismay, but the peer was equal to the occasion, and dexterously caught it before it reached the ground.

A Horse That Frisked.

Much amusement was caused at the Coronation of George III. by the antics of the steed of the High Steward, who on that occasion was Lord Talbot. The horse insisted upon entering Westminster Hall backwards, and poor Lord Talbot had to call upon bystanders to help him to turn the refractory animal the way it should go.

At the same Coronation the great diamond fell out of the crown during the ceremony. The superstitious believed it to be an omen of the loss of our American colonies.

Before the Coronation the workmen struck at Westminster Hall, and at the last moment the Earl Marshal was found to have forgotten the Sword of State. Indeed the mischances were so numerous that afterwards the King administered a regular royal dressing down to the responsible official. The only reply the wretched man could find to make was to promise that "it should not occur again!"

Poor Queen Anne's Coronation.

For rank mismanagement the Coronation of Queen Anne would be difficult to beat. The small blunders were endless, but the culmination was reached when thieves carried off the whole of the valuable plate used at the banquet together with the pewter, china, the beautiful table linen, and a vast quantity of other property.

The many mishaps that marred the Coronations of the Stuart Kings are matters of history. When James I. was crowned plague shorn the ceremony of all its glory. The crowning of Charles I. was marked by a dozen ill omens.

The barge carrying the King to the Palace ran aground. When Laud presented the King to the people in the recognised fashion, saying: "I desire you, by your general acclamation, to testify your consent and willingness," dead silence reigned until the Earl Marshal was forced to tell the spectators that they must shout.

Later it was found that the left wing of the dove on the sceptre staff had been mysteriously broken off. Worse than all, during the ceremony there was a low rumbling mutter, and all London was shaken by an earthquake.

When the Footmen Fought.

Curiously enough, during the Coronation of his son, Charles II., there was a violent thunderstorm. "There were terrible thunders when none expected it," says Baxter, the historian. Also, there was a quarrel between the Royal footmen and the Barons of the Cinque Ports for the possession of the canopy which it was the latter's privilege to bear over the King's head. One of the footmen was actually arrested and clapped into prison.

The evil omens marking the Coronation of the unhappy James II. were really amazing. The crown absolutely refused to remain on the monarch's head. It had to be held in place by Henry Sidney. The day was not windy, yet as the guns signalled the crowning the great flag on the White Tower was suddenly torn away.

Later, when the King was returning after the ceremony, the canopy, which was of cloth of gold, was split by a gust of wind.

"'Twas of cloth of gold," writes Aubrey, "and my strength, I am confident, could not have rent it, and it was not a windy day."

It is the fervent hope of all King George's loyal subjects that his own crowning will be unmarred by any untoward event.—P.W.

ROSEBERY'S SUGGESTIONS.

Germes of Great Imperial Conclave to be Seen in the Present London Conference.

London, June 19.—At a memorable gathering to-day in Westminster Hall, which, as the chairman, Lord Rosebery, pointed out was traditionally the hall of William Rufus and certainly was the scene of the trial of Warren Hastings, and where Stafford and his master confronted their judges, the Lords and Commons lunched the visiting overseas M. P.'s, the members of the conference also being guests.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier sat on the left of Lord Rosebery, with Speaker Lowther and Sir Mackenzie Bowell on the other side. Rt. Hon. M. Botha and Lord Strathcona were neighbors at Premier Asquith's table. Also at the main tables were Sir Frederick Borden, Premiers Sifton, Morris, Gouin and Roblin, Hon. Mr. Brodeur and Senators Power, Lougheed, Watson and Casagrain.

Lord Rosebery described the gathering as one of the home backwoods-men with the backwoodsman of the Dominions, and delivered a characteristically witty speech. He did not believe that any Parliament had yet reached final shape.

The principle of our Empire allowed each part to settle its own affairs, but there was an interest higher and common to all, the interest of the Empire. What were we doing to make ourselves worthy of our inheritance? In imperial conference, might we not see the germs of a greater conclave, representing imperial aspirations, reflecting the unity of the Empire permanently, thus forming the most august parliament the world had ever seen?

"I believe that some day we shall wake up to find ourselves a federated empire," he concluded.

Among mourning accessories black suede gloves are smarter than lace kid because of their dull finish, but the latter are quite correct, even when a long crepe veil is worn.
