Drifting Into College.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"The greatest mistake in my life was made when I drifted into college," a young woman said to me the other day. "All the other girls in my crowd were going and so I went. I knew my father expected me to be capable of supporting myself when I graduated, but I thought I should probably teach. When I finished college I found I hated teaching but there wasn't anything else for me to do. I'm teaching now but I'm not a success, and never shall be, because I hate my work."

"What would you do if you had your life to live over again?" I asked. Her face lit up like the sun suddenly coming out in splendor on a cloudy day. "I should study interior decorating or something along that line," she said. "I have a little talent for drawing and I love anything to do with houses. If I had gone to some technical school and learned something along that line, I should have been far happier to-day."

"Why don't you go now?" I asked. The sun went back behind a cloud. "It's too late now," she said, drearily. "I cannot ask Father for more money for another education, and I can't earn it myself this way."

That's what I call a tragedy.

And a tragedy that is happening every day.

For every day girls with their living to earn are drifting into college and finding after they have spent all their spare time and money that they are not prepared for any vocation which they enjoy.

A college education is the ideal thing for the girl who does not expect to get from it any financial return; or for the girl who can supplement it with some technical training; or for the girl who wishes to teach; but for the girl who must have a financial return and who cannot afford any supplementary training, and does not want to teach, a college education is likely to be a great mistake.

"What is Dorothy going to do when she gets through High School?" I asked a mother the other day.

"Well, she used to think she wanted to take the Kindergarten training, but all her friends are going to college, so I imagine she will end up in college," said Dorothy's mother.

Another girl drifting along the line of least resistance into a probable mistake!

How much wiser the mother who said to me of her ten year old girl, "If she keeps the tastes she has now we will try to make an architect of her. She takes such an interest in houses and the way they are built."

I think all parents ought to take careful stock of their children's tastes and talents and do what they can to see that their education is along the lines of their greatest possibility.

Don't let your girl drift into college. Let her go there if that is the best thing, by all means, but don't let her drift to college simply because it's the most obvious course.

Ruth Cameron

Fashions and Fads.

Wide moire ribbon is being used for millinery trimmings and sashes. Rhinestones and other jewelled effects are seen in the newest buttons from abroad.

Inexpensive bead necklaces are worn to complete the color scheme of a costume.

The new velours de laine have all sorts of cords, wide and narrow, diagonal and straight.

A French idea is an all-white costume of linen with a huge black velvet bow at the waist.

One of the prettiest shapes to be seen among the new Canton crepes is tulle, a pale, evasive green.

The new silks are nothing short of splendid, with their interwoven gold threads and brilliant colors.

Hemstitched cuffs of white satin, turning back over the cloth sleeve, are very pretty and very French.

Wool plush, a silk-and-wool fabric which is very pliant, is admirable for tailored suits of the elaborate type.

Serge, whipcord, plain and broad-corded poplins, velour, moire and soft silks are all being used for winter dresses.

Wool rattines for fall come in lovely shades of saddle and tobacco brown, amethyst, taupe, sapphire and marine blue.

Small crowns are evident in a great many of the new velour hats and frequently they are full and of some soft material.

It looks as if the heeless sandal might be the accepted reaction after the coburnus shoe, with its ankle straps and very high heel.

Furs of every imaginable kind are mere wisps of transparent stuffs. It is left for the skirts and sash to show the actual richness of the gown material.

One of the new corsets has its material cut in points above the waist—these points being set on a band of elastic, which gives perfect ease in breathing.

For a cloth dress it is often bet-

Nurse's Years of Experience

Proves Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills
Best Treatment for Kidney and Stomach Troubles.

The trained nurse has even greater opportunities than the doctor himself to watch the action of medicine in specific cases.

For years the writer of this letter has been recommending the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills among her patients, and is firmly convinced that no treatment is so prompt and effective.

This is the most valuable evidence obtainable, and we believe that all who know Mrs. Duffy will appreciate it to the full, knowing that she would not recommend anything in which she had not the fullest confidence.

Mrs. Duffy, nurse, 35 Lewis street, Toronto, writes: "I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for years, and recommended them to my patients for all disorders of the kidneys, liver and stomach. In all my professional experience I have found nothing better." Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers or Edman, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Prize Fighter and Ten Others Held over Burns.

Holmer Wins in England.
Edinburgh, Sept. 6.—Hans Holmer, the American professional long distance runner, to-day won the British professional mile championship, beating F. Kanally by twenty yards. His time was 4 minutes and 24 2-5 seconds.

New York, Sept. 9.—To-night the Atlantic Garden A.C. on the Bowery, will be crowded with fight fans to witness the bout between Sam Langford, the Nova Scotian negro, whom many consider the greatest of heavy weight champions, of the present day, and John L. Johnson, who is a big tough slugging rough and tumble scrapper. In the inner circles the tip has been going round that Langford has been going back, being far from the annihilator he was once, and that Johnson will give him a lot of trouble. Sam, however, has a distinct advantage in reach and experience.

Parsons Got Decision.
Several hundred fans witnessed the boxing bout between Billy Parsons and Kid Burns at the arena last night. Parsons got the decision in the 11th round, after the bout had been stopped by the Deputy Chief of Police to the great disgust of the crowd. There was a lot of clinching in the early rounds, with Parsons forcing the fighting and Burns stalling. In the fifth, Parsons drew blood from Burns' mouth with jabs in the face. In the sixth, Parsons kept peppering Burns in the mouth, which he had opened up in the previous round. Burns, however, was coming back and had Parsons even in the seventh, while in the eighth Parsons floored Burns, who took the count of nine. Burns was strong in the ninth, while the tenth was fairly even, and in the 11th Parsons pounded Burns on the head and was playing for a knockout when the bout was stopped. Many of the crowd were demonstrative, and Burns' followers shouted for a draw.

are held to the Superior court charged with murder in the second degree. The decision was rendered by Justice Summerfield, at Vemor, before whom the preliminary hearing of the accused men was held. These held to a higher court besides Willard and Me-

Carey, are: Al Greenwald, promoter; Tom Jones, Willard's manager; Harry Gilman, Jr., Young's manager; Al Harder, timekeeper; Charles Eytan, referee; Walter Monahan, John Davis, Charles Anallinger, James Cameron and Eddie Webster, seconds. In addition to the charge of murder in the second degree, charges of prize fighting rest against the accused men. The bonds of $5,000 for Willard, and $1,500 for each of the others were left unchanged.

Your Duty.

Nothing to do with the Custom House, good friend. Its only reference just now is to yourself. Let us suppose that you are a man of family with sufficient of the world's goods to keep them in comfort. Very well. You did not reach this satisfactory state of affairs without care and labour—few men do. Suppose you are awakened some night with shouts of alarm ringing in your ears. Too late then to talk of prudence; too late then to say: "If I had only, etc., etc." That "If" means too much to many forgetful people. Is it not always the duty of a self-respecting citizen to protect his home and thus provide for those within it. Is it any more then his duty to those depending on him to protect them as far as possible? Can you call your property your own when it is not insured? The answer to this argument is to carry insurance with Percie Johnson's agency, the most popular office in Newfoundland and the least expensive.

The Vagrant

The road is long and dusty, his legs are old and rusty, and we a rilly he w e n d s; his clothes are all in tatters, but nothing to him matters; he has no home or friends. The village housewives shoo him, the farmers' dogs pursue him and bite him when they can; the little children eye him with dread when they go by him—alas, poor friendless man! He is a horrid warning, and some cold winter morning we'll find him in a ditch, as dead as old Jack Horner, and in the Pauper's Corner his nameless bones we'll pitch. And once this weary wanderer had dreams as full of splendour as any you have known; and he had hopes of rising to heights of fame surprising, where he would stand alone. But ere he sought the treasure he'd give some days to pleasure, some hours to was-sail high; and so he played and gambled, and youth went slipping by. He wasted all his chances, and now, as age advances, we see him in his rags; this is the true life story of hosts of failures hoary, of hosts of hungry vags. And is it your endeavor, young man, so bright and clever, like this old wreck to be? Oh, Youth, while you are playing in wastral pathways straying the golden chances flee!
