IF WE COULD ONLY WRITE TO THEM!

Wouldn't it be the most wonderful privilege that ever was if we could only be allowed to write letters (knowing they were to receive them) to people who have died?

If they could answer them, too, of course that would take half its terrors away from death, but even if we could just write them what a relief it would be!

Perhaps you are thinking to yourself: "What on earth is the woman talking about? Has she gone clean daff? Whatever put that idea into her head?"

Or Maybe You've Felt It, Too.

And then again, perhaps you are thinking: "So she's felt that way, too." And "that way" means that she has found ourselves thinking: "If I could just write and tell her about that how pleased she would be."

Or: "Wouldn't it interest him to know that it came out just the way he thought it would. He said he knew they would never get along together."

Or: "How she would laugh at that! It's just the sort of thing that she always saw the point of. It seems as if I must sit down and write her about it."

Or: "Now I understand what mother meant. If I could only write her a letter and tell her that I know, now that I have children of my own, how she felt. If I could only tell her!"

Those Purple Patches Of Childhood.

Sometimes you find yourself thinking back to some special purple patch in your childhood. That grey November day when mother let you invite the neighborhood in for an impromptu candy pull. The way she always brought home the first maple sugar with such joy because she knew you were crazy about it and put it under your plate at supper. (Oh, the thrill of coming home to supper and finding your plate turned down!) The rainy holiday when she and father played charades all the afternoon with you. And you wish you could sit down and tell them how bright and sweet those memories are.

Once when my brother was a young man and I was a youngster, he let me go off with him one afternoon on the golf links. I felt so proud and important to be with him and to have him talking with me just as if I were a young lady. It was an hour of unusual nearness and companionship with one I so deeply admired and looked up to. I think it might have been the first of many more. But he never came back from the next business trip that took him away. And often when I am out on the golf links now, I think of that time and wish I could write and tell him how I have treasured the memory of that afternoon.

They May Be Immortal But Not Omniscient.

Of course the obvious answer to this whimsical wish is that they do know all that is in our minds. I wonder if they do? I wonder if they share omniscience just because they have passed from one life to another? Is it anywhere promised? But even if it is, that does not quite satisfy me. I don't want them just to look omnisciently into my mind and read it. I want to write a letter and tell them about it myself.

ARLIE MARKS PLAYERS IN SEAFARING STORY "OUT YONDER."

The Arlie Marks Players offer to the lovers of dramatic entertainment, a well known sea-faring story, "Out Yonder." This bill will be played Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. It is said to be one of the most powerful plays of this talented company's repertoire. The piece was such a success on the American continent that a tremendous motion picture version was made of it, and in it was starred the late Olive Thomas. The bill is complete with comedy, pathos and thrills and with a beautiful touch of humaneness. New scenic equipment has been made to go with this play. Above them all, none should miss this one as it is the very type of production that a St. John's audience will appreciate. Miss Arlie Marks, your favourite, will be seen in a beautiful character well befitting her versatility and Lindsay E. Perrin, the Crown Prince of merriment, is seen in one of his most popular roles. Special attention has been given to the casting of this bill as well as to every small detail.

Five great big acts of superior vaudeville will be featured including The Great Andrews, the noted American Magician in magic a la carte and Princess Abdi Hamid, the woman of mystery in mind reading and crystal gazing. These are two wonderful attractions which in themselves are distinct features of superlative entertainment value. As the curtain rises at 8:30 sharp, patrons are advised to be in their seats at commencement of first act. As Thursday is a general holiday, there will be a special matinee in the afternoon, the bill for that day and the remaining of the week will be that phenomenal success, "Hello Bill."

"Mary Queen of Scots"

AT THE MAJESTIC TO-DAY.

The much-admired picture—"The Loves of Mary Queen of Scots"—is at the Majestic to-day. The story told is that of the celebrated Scottish queen. It is not mere history—though it keeps pretty closely to recorded facts—but intense drama, quivering with passion. This follows inevitably from the extraordinarily dramatic character of Mary's stormy career.

The film is alive with thrilling situations—the murder of Rizzio, the attack on Bothwell Castle, etc.,—while the womanly side of the queen's nature softens it with a human quality which immensely enhances its appeal. It is, in fact, above all else a compellingly human story.

One of the realistic features of the film is that it was enacted in parts. In the very scenes in which Mary's life was lived—at Holyrood and so forth. Another is the part which hundreds of Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders took in one of the great battle scenes.

Fay Compton is the queen, and gives a magnificent portrayal of the character. She wears, by the way, no fewer than twenty different dresses in the picture, all specially designed.

The film will be showing at the Majestic for three days. It is one of those not too numerous pictures which should emphatically not be missed.

To add to the attraction, a 3 piece Orchestra will render appropriate music for the feature.

Note:—Coming to the Majestic direct from Keith's Theatre, Boston, Messrs. Adams and Cheney, two high class musical artists. They will arrive by the S. S. Rosalind.
