These Boston Girls
Kitty—I don't think I can ever care for Fred again.
Bertha—Why not? I thought you and he were very much in love with each other.
Kitty—So we were, but last night Fred told me I was the first woman he had ever loved.
Bertha—I should think that would make you very happy.
Kitty—On the contrary, it makes me miserable. It is so awful, you know, to think that a man begins his love-making with you at a time when he has had no experience. It's no compliment to your attractiveness, don't you see?—Boston Transcript.

Benefits of Publicity.
"Take off your coat and vest," said Holdup Hank. "That's right. Now your shirt."
"What for?" asked the shivering victim. "You've got my $41. That's all the money I have."
"I don't know about that," said Holdup Hank. "The last man I operated on had $17 in his pants pockets, and I got that, but he told the policeman and reporters I'd missed $104 he had in his undershirt. I saw it in the papers next day. I ain't takin no chances any more. Off with that shirt!"—Chicago Tribune.

Woe of Poverty.
Hubert, the son of a poor widow, leaped against the broken gate that disfigured the front fence of his humble home and wept bitterly.
"Alas!" said he. "There is no possibility that I may be kidnapped. About the only way I can get my piece in the papers is to go and rob a bank!"
As Socrates said so cleverly, the poor man is excess baggage.—Indianapolis Press.

Perfectly True.
"You disapprove of some of the conventional fictions?"
"I do," answered Miss Cayenne.
"And yet I have heard you exclaim to a number of people, 'I am delighted to see you.'"
"The remark was perfectly true in each case. I shouldn't care to be blind, you know."—Washington Star.

Would Forget.
"My memory annoys me greatly," said the newly elected mayor.
"Failing is it?" inquired his wife.
"No, that's just the trouble. I remember all my ante-election promises, and I wish I could forget 'em!"—Philadelphia Press.

Evidently Something Soft.
"Then I made tracks down the street," said Manchester, continuing his narration.
"Was the ground covered with snow or mud?" Birmingham interrupted.—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

An Imitative Woman.
Mrs. Wig—That odious widow, the hateful thing, has gone and got a dress made exactly like mine.
Mrs. Wace—That's nothing. She's trying to marry my husband's twin brother.—Philadelphia Record.

Too Bad.
Mrs. Mann—That young Mr. Childers is dead. It was awfully sudden. Isn't it too bad?
Mr. Mann—And he was getting along so famously at coloring his meerschaum.—Transcript.

Thought Better of It.
"Might I inquire whose umbrella that is you are carrying?" asked Mr. Perryville of Mr. Westpark.
"You might."
"Then I won't."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Watching His Opportunity.
"Your son has a very noble appetite!"
"Yes, I'm so ashamed of him. He'll eat ways overcast when we have company."
"Then's the only chance I ever had of said the terrible infant.—Cleveland Herald-Examiner.
