CAN you imagine a batter hitting

If or passing a preceding runner on the base lines?

No! Well that actually happened several years ago in a game between Chicago and Washington at Chicago.

Catcher Eddie Gharrity of the Washington club was the player who hit the ball. Frank Ellerbe, then with Washington, now with the St. Louis Browns, pulled the bit of ivory on the bases, which had Gharrity as the victim.

Two were out and Ellerbe on first, with Gharrity up. The Washington catcher, who hits them hard, got one to his liking, and sent it sailing into the left field bleachers.

As is customary when some player hits a mighty wallop good for a home run, the crowd led out a cheer when Gharrity's drive soared into the bleachers.

Ellerbe, off with the pitch, had rounded third when he got the impression that the ball had been caught because of the cheering on the part of the crowd.

Taking it for granted that the side had been retired, after he rounded third, he started for his position in the infield. He was playing short in that particular game. It so happened that Ellerbe, on his way back to short, was passed by Gharrity.

The umpire in charge immediately called Gharrity out for passing a proceding base runner.

The Washington club yelled long and loud, insisting such a decision was not in keeping with fair play, since the ball had passed out of the playing field and no play possible on the runners.

The umpires remained firm, however, and the play on the part of Ellerbe must be given a rating in the list of famous "bones."
