Mrs. Lemoine laughed at the gossip that being established.

of Quinte, about eight miles from Napanee and four from the main line of the Grand Trunk Railway, with which it is connected by a line Mailway, with which it is connected by a line owned and operated by the Rathbun Company. Desoronto has a population of 3400 in habitants, is as pushing and as lively a little town as can be found in Ontario, and within the last shree years has made more rapid strides than any town in the Province, having during that period more than doubled its population. The phenomenal prosperity of this little town is due to the energy and enterprise of the Rathbun Company, whose mills and factories are a little world in themselves. The firm employs some 3000 men, of whom about 300 are residents of Deseronto. Dwenty-five years ago, when old Mr. Rathbun settled at Mill Point—as Deseronto was then called—there was neshing there but an old one-horse mill. Row there is perhaps the finest sawmill in Canada, a large cedar mill, a fine rolles flour mill, gas works, car works, which turn out two freight cars every day, and artensive charcoal and chemical works. To these industries has lately been added the manufacture of porous terrs cotta. The object of the company in starting all these industries has been to utilize all the refuse from thrimilis; and they have so far succeeded that to-day there is not a basketful of chaps the surpring of charcoal, when could yielded being four barrels for every cord of wood. The wood-spirit agreed for a wery cord of wood. The wood-spirit is all did it is distilled wood. The wood-spirit is all did it is distilled wood. yielded being four barrels for every cord of wood. From this liquid is distilled woodspirit, acetate of lime and some other lye-products. The wood-spirit is all sold to the Dominion Government, by whom it is used in the manufacture of methylated spirits. Each cord of wood makes 50 bushels of charcoal, which could be supplied for smelting purposes at about 6c a bushel.

Mr. E. W. Rathbun, the senior member of the firm, was examined before the commissioners. He stated he had given the smelting of iron a good deal of attention and was fully convinced that charcoal iron could be profitably smelted in Ontario. Deseronto offered great advantages for such works. It has the best facilities for shipping by water and tail. There is a railway to the back country, and as the charcoal would be but extending an established the Rathbun Company would be willing to undertake the supplying of two 20-con furnaces with the requisite quantity of charcoal.

CHINESE PEDAGOGS. Blad Enough of Money of Foreign Pupils but Ashamed of the Pupils Themselves.

From The Chinese Times.

All of us have our experiences of the in pincible contempt in which we are held by our stolid mentors, who accept our presents with the air of a chief levying tribute from his resainers. Amusing, indeed, are the ways in which the frowsy old pedagogs betray their feelings, and childishly ingenious the devices serve their assumption of superiority before helr countrymen while disguising it before the foreigner. Chinese etiquette helps them, for they can put it on and off at pleasure, and amust to the foreigner net being cute enough to follow its ramifications. But sometimes even agust to the foreigner net being cute enough to follow its ramifications. But sometimes even the ceremonial forms are a snare to them.

Que, who was in the habit of being reverentially bowed out of the house after each day's resea, and stopped at the threshold to return the obeisances of his pupil found on one occasion a sudden necessity for adjusting his dress, and in doing so omitted the customary formality. Struck by the singularity of the proceeding, the fereigner had the curiosity to follow the teacher into the street, and there may passing a Chinese Ting-ch'ai, in whose passence the old teacher would not demean himself by doing reverence to the foreigner.

Another kindly disposed scholar induced his teacher to dine and accompany him to a theater. Unpleasant as it is to sit near to a well-neurished Chinese during the time while his thoracic air passages are charged with explosiveness, it must be allowed that the could not, in fact, endure being publicly seen in the company of a foreigner. Needless to say that in the streets your well-bred Chinese talk like the Levits, on the other others. to say that in the streets your well-bred Chinese walk, like the Levite, on the other side when they see their foreign acquaintances
