

as he stood on the wharf in a butternut coat, buff vest, and white hat. He has an elegant steam yacht, in which he navigates its placid waters.

Georgeville is a place of some importance, where a stop is made for the mails, and you steam across to the western shore to Knowlton's Landing. Steaming on from this landing, and rounding the bold rocky promontory of Gibraltar Point, you have a wide view, with Mount Orford in the distance—the highest summit of Lower Canada, 3,300 feet elevation, distance five miles from the village of Magog. It may be ascended by carriage road-way to the summit.

MT. ORFORD, LAKE MEMPHREMAGOG.

A few miles from Newport is Lake Willoughby. This remarkable sheet of water lies between two lofty mountain walls, evidently once united, but torn asunder by some terrible convulsion of nature in remote ages. The surface of the lake is nearly twelve hundred feet above sea level, and the mountain walls tower on either side to the height of nearly two thousand feet above the lake. Mount Willoughby, the eastern wall, is nearly two thousand feet in height, and Mount Hor, on the western side, is of somewhat less elevation. From the summit of these heights you may look to the south-east upon the White and Franconia Mountains, westward to the bold peaks and ranges of the Green Mountains, northward into the Canadas, and southward along the wide valley between the great mountain ranges. From Newport to the White Mountains, Lake Winnepesaukee, and Boston is a delightful ride along the picturesque Passumpsic and Merrimac Rivers, whose ever-varying scenery makes the trip one long to be remembered.

Travellers, who have seen them both, say that Memphremagog, for beauty of scenery, altitude of surrounding mountains, and picturesque indentation of shore, bears away the palm from the far-famed Lochs Lomond and Katrine. It has also, in some of
