NEW CHURCH AT CLAYGATE, SURREY .- The hamlet of Claygate is that part of the parish of Thames Ditton which extends sonthward of the Admiralty Semaphore on Cooper'shill. It contains about 500 inhabitants. The greatest part of that number reside within a mile of the site of the new The greatest part church; but they are three miles distant from the old church, which is situate at the northern extremity of the parish, and there is no church at a less distance sufficiently spacious to afford them accommodation. A few months ago a gentleman (the Rev. Frederick Bevan, Rector of Carleton Rode, Norfolk), while visiting in the neighbourhood, became acmainted with the condition of the place, and feeling con-inced that every hope of amelioration must be derived from de pastoral care of a resident clergyman, most generously offered the sum of £2000 for the permanent endowment of a church, provided sufficient funds could be raised for the erection of the building: £1100 have been collected, and the church is partly built. About £300 are still wanting to complete it. The inhabitants of the place are poor.

CHURCH PASTORAL-AID SOCIETY.—The committees for the months of August and September voted grants for eight additional clergymen and one lay assistant. The society how aids 275 incumbents, having under their charge an ag-gregate population of 2,025,456; or each, on an average, the harge of 7365 souls, while the average amount of their incomes is only £162, and 135 of these incumbents are without parsonage-houses. Previous to the aid of the society only 309 clergymen were engaged in the pastoral care of the above-stated population. The existing grants are to proide stipends for 290 clergymen and 45 lay assistants, at a charge to the society, when all the appointments shall be made by the incumbents, of £26,106 per annum. 221 cler-symen and 40 lay assistants are now supported in their im-Portant labours by the society, at a charge of £20,341 per

The fire in the Arsenal was not entirely got under until latof damage—certainly not so great as was stated in my letter of yesterday, as the Talavera was an old ship, and the estimate of ner worth, if sold by auction, the usual mode of disposing of ships when unserviceable, is not above 20,000l., though to replace he with a new ship of the same class would be from 70,000l. to 80,000l. The other vessels must be estimated in the same way; but the loss of stores is immense. The sheds, covered as the were with painted and tarred paper, cost from 10,000*l*. to 12,000. each; the cost, when covered with copper, is from 30,000l. to 30,000l. each. RESIGNATION OF THE SANCHO MINISTRY.—GENERAL EsPARTERO APPOINTED PRIME MINISTER.—By a decree of the 16th inst, the Queen has accepted the resignation of the Sancho in Church acceptance.

ministry.

By a decree of the same day, she has named General Espartero President of the Council of Ministers, conferring on him the powers necessary to enable him to form the Cabinet himself.

General Espartero has accepted the office. Espartero is now the dictator of Spain, and the wretched figure of royalty, the Queen Regent, exists only at his mercy. How long he will pursue a moderate course, remains to be seen. It is probable that he will observe some forms of propriety, and allow the ordinary march of government to be pursued; but the party who support him will not be content with any show of moderation, and in a few weeks he may expect to find a renewal of anarchy and disorder. It is not likely that he will readily forgive O'Donnel and the other officers who have resisted his power, and gathered round the unhappy Christina, at Valencia; nor will his followers pardon those moderados who, in their eyes, have taken the position once occupied by the Carlists. The immediate effect, however, of the reconciliation of the Queen and Espartero will be favourable to Spanish prospects, but we are too much accustomed to the constant change of things at Madrid, to believe that the proposed setthement will be of long duration.

The Boyal decree appointing Espartero minister had created a strong sensation in that capital. The junta had drawn up a a strong sensation in that capital. The junta had drawn up a fulsome address to Espartero, insisting that the Queen should publish a manifesto to the nation, reprobating the counsels of the traitors who had compromised the safety of the throne and endangered the public tranquillity, in which she was, moreover, required to accept their programme. Resolutions were also passed by this loyal and dutiful body, calling upon her Majesty to remove from her person and household all individuals who had induced her to enter upon a course of re-action, to annul the odious municipal law, and disselve the Cortes, and convoke a new one, with special powers to satisfy the demands of the people. Until these requisitions shall be complied with, the junta decline to lay down their arms. It was reported at Madrid that the Queen had summoned all the juntas to meet at Aranjuez, and adopt, in concert with Espartero, whatever measures they may consider called for in the present circumstances of Spain. General O'Donnell is said to have embarked for France. General Iriarte was guarded in his hotel by six officers and 40 National Guards.
