Food for the Passage.---Where females or children are in a family, it may be proper and necessary to have sugar and tea, or coffee; but in general it may be well to avoid cooking as much as possible. Persons unused to the sea find it very awkward to attend at the cookhouse, especially in bad weather, even if not prevented by sea-sickness; and the fire is much occupied, where there are passengers in addition to the ship's company: therefore, biscuit, butter, cheese, bacon, ham, eggs, onions, &c., which require little or no preparation, would be the preferable articles for sea stock; with one or two large plain cakes, apples, and spice. A little brandy also may be useful, nay required, medicinally; and salts, castor-oil, rhubarb, magnesia, hartshorn, laudanum, &c. with oatmeal* for gruel. The passage to Prince Edward Island may occupy thirty days, but provisions should be laid in for seven weeks.

The Irish Emigrants, who find themselves, usually live on oatmeal porridge, sometimes sweetened with molasses, a wholesome diet, but not common among Englishmen---and for dinner herrings and potatoes, nor do they always take enough of this economical food.

Passage.---As freights are now low, and many vessels cannot obtain charters to pay expenses and interest of capital, it is probable that, in case a number of farmers were to apply to a proprietor, or some commercial friend, arrangements would be made to accommodate them on the best terms

* Oatmeal for porridge should form a chief article of the Emigrant's sea-stock, not only on account of the facility of preparing it, but because of its being a most wholesome food, calculated to retain the body in a state of health.
