The proposed ship canal from the head of the great lakes to tidewater is now receiving great attention from our neigh bors, who view with some apprehension the opening of the enlarged St. Lawrence system next year, and whose experience in the recent war with Spain has dis closed the fact that a ship canal to the sea would be of great benefit to them from a naval point of view.

They were then put together, but hardly in time to be of any material service. Had there been a ship canal around the Falls on the New York State side all this trouble would have been avoided, and many more vessels that ply on the upper lakes would have been available for war service. For these reasons it has become quite generally known that very serious consideration will be given by an early Congress to the ship canal scheme.
