Pilot of Handley-Page Bombing Flight On Coastwise Trip Forced To Make Landing in Driving Rain and Pitch Darkness-Barely Escaped Cliffs in Circling Over Long Island Sound—Gasoline Shortage Made the Descent Imperative.

enport, L. I., Oct. 10.—The Hand-aige bombing plane Atlantic, which compelled to land here last night her 11 passengers, 80 miles short But Major Brackley decided to give was compelled to land here last night with her 11 passengers, 80 miles short of Mineola, will not resume her flight to Mitchel Field today, according to the tresent plans of Admiral Kerr, the formander of the giant bomber. The four eagle eight Rolls Royce engines which had propelled a dead weight of 2,800 pounds for twelve hours against an average headwind of 40 miles an hour, constituting, it is believed, a world's record, were subjected to a terrific gruelling and will have to be given a thorough routine inspection before another start is made. This, together with the work of taking aboard the three hundred gallons of gasoline and forty gallons of oil ordered from Mineola last night, will make a getaway in the opinion of Admiral Kerr impracticable before Saturday at least.

When Major Herbert Brackley of the Royal Air Force brought the plane down to a perfect landing on an unknown field in a driving rakin and in pitch dark-ning M. H. Dennis, vice-president of the to a perfect landing on an unknown field in a driving rain and in pitch darkness at 11:45 o'clock last night, there was but twenty gallons of gasoline in the tanks.

Supply Was Falling Short.

The machine started out from Parrsboro with 900 gallons aboard, which was considered ample for the run to Mineola. An hour before Long Island was reached, however, the main tank had become exhausted and all that was left to keep the engines running was that contained in the four auxiliary tanks with a capacity of twenty gallons each. When over Greenport the overflow from the tanks stopped and a landing was imperative. Swooping down to earth a close-up inspection of the ground was made. Ray Lingwood, a former member of the Canadian aviation force, who is employed here, flashed a signal warning the dviators of the presence of highvoltage wires. Automobile lights were flashed on various fields and along the ation by the Germans.

There are two stories of the trip. One is that of the four passengers, including W. H. Dennis, vice-president of the Halifax Herald, none of whom knew anything of the rapidly diminishing supply of gasoline and experienced no anxiety whatever throughout the trip, and the other that of the officers and crew of six all told, who knew after leaving Boston that a forced landing at night might be inevitable.

Dr. H. Mueller, minister of foreign affairs, admitted during the session that many soldiers from South German garrisons were going to the Baltic provinces on fake passports, adding that they were chiefly adventurers who expect a free and easy life there, and expect eventually to settle down.

Lack of Discipline.

Discussing the prevailing lack of discipline, the minister declared it made it easy for German troops to go overinto Russian service, and he asserted that the people were daily approaching the foreign office in a secret manner with information to the effect that the Entente would be pleased to see German troops fighting in Russian units.

"If the Entente is desirous to have us withdraw the last German trooper from Russian formations," he said "we might be permitted to express the desire that the Entente request Russia to discontinue attempts to attract Germans into their service."

Dr. Thomas Carter Devoting All His Time and Energies to Case.

Chicago, Oct. 9.-From two little white cots in the children's ward at Columbus Hospital, 2548 Lakeview avenue, two little faces tried bravely to mue, two little faces tried bravely to smile up at the cheerful-visaged, middle-aged doctor and the two nurses who strove to make them comfortable. Had not the effects of mercury poison, administered by their mother, made the mere act of living a hardship for them, the little bodies covered by the snow-white sheets would have been jumping and dancing and twitching with the very joy of existence.

Expert There, Ready.

In a stateroom of a big coach attached to the fastest train on the Michigan Central Railway, the little poison sufferers sped from Detroit to Chicago in a race with death. They arrived at 2 o'clock, and were rushed in a motor ambulance to the hospital, where Dr. Thomas A. Carter, noted toxicologist and mercury poison expert, awaited their coming.

In a jail cell at Pontiac, Michigan, the mother is reported to be in almost a constant state of hysteria, and grave concern is expressed for the stability of her act.

of her act. Call for Mother.

The little girls, Edna and Shirley Luikhart, called vainly for their mother all through the long trip from Detroit, where they had been in the Providence Hospital after the mother confessed giving them the poison because they hindered her ambitions to go on the stage. For a week she had watched over them, expecting them to die, and telling their father and the neighbors they had eaten green pears and had become sick.

Dr. Carter, at the instigation of his wife, who became interested in the story of the little girls, has promised to treat them free of cost. He has two little daughters of his own—"both blondes, too," he says. They are 7 and 10 years old.

SAYS BRITAIN IS STILL TRAVELING THE ROAD TO RUIN

London, Oct., 10.—Forecasting another British loan to replace the nation's floating debt, the financial editor of The Mail declares it is the opinion of businessmen that Great Britain is still traveling "the road to ruin," and drifting on without evidence of real reform in the government's westeful extravagance.

Notwithstanding warnings from J. Austin Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, and others, relative to the danger chancellor of the exchequer, and others, relative to the danger of the situation, national expenditures, the writer points out, during the 3 months of July, August and September, actually exceeded those of the previous quarter and the government was continually forced to borrow money. money.
