For All Complexion Ills

If the skin be colorless, sallow, muddy, over-red, blotchy or freckled, nothing will so surely overcome the condition as ordinary uncolored wax. It literally takes off a bad complexion—absorbs the dead and near-dead particles of surface skin, gently, gradually, causing no inconvenience at all. A new complexion is then in evidence, clear, spotless, delicately soft and beautiful. One ounce of this wax, procurable at any drugstore, will relieve even the worst complexion. It is used like cold cream.

SENDS MOTHER A KISS FROM DEAD SON'S LIPS

Lance Corporal William J. Sinclair
Writes of Noble Death of His Brother

Couldn't Die Better—Many a Gallant Canadian Giving His Life Daily For Liberty

(Toronto Star.)

In a letter, splashed with the tears that fell as he wrote, Lance Corporal William J. Sinclair told his mother, Mrs. A. Sinclair, 69 Trinity street, of his younger brother, Melville's death in action on September 15th, and sent her a kiss, taken from the dead boy's lips when he fell mortally wounded by a German shell in the chest. This letter came before the fateful yellow telegraph form from Ottawa, so dreaded these days by the mothers of fighting sons, and was the first intimation she had of Melville's death. So far she has not yet received official word, although he is in today's casualty list.

The letter is remarkable for the spirit of boyish manliness. Sorrow for his own loss and for his mother's grief is tinged with a pride in his own, his mother's and his comrades' deeds, and is full of a love and a faith that rises triumphantly above his brother's death. Perhaps his pencilled lines, blurred by another mourner's tears, was a gentle way of telling Mrs. Sinclair of her son's supreme sacrifice than the typewritten words of a telegram. The reading of this letter should give comfort to more than one mother.

"It is hard, mother dear," the letter begins, "to write you today, for, by the time this letter reaches you, you will know that your baby boy, my dear brother, went to glory along a path which only men go, fighting for you and for our God, and for our glorious Empire and Flag. I know he died in the way all soldiers want to die. He got killed by a big shell in a charge, which would have done credit to any troop of older soldiers, much less a party of green boys."

"We went over, mother, just the way you would have us do, but you know Melville was no match for me in a race, so in the excitement I left him behind and reached Fritz's front line, which we took and held until we were relieved."

"Lefty Boyce and I buried Mel. He

Look Mother! If Tongue is Coated Give "California Syrup of Figs"

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without gripping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

When the little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomachache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

had a funeral service which your own good Canon Dixon could not have improved on."

One of Seven Reached Home.

"We were hit pretty hard in the charge. Of the seven boys in my section who left the trench I alone his Fritz's line. But when night came on in spite of his bombardment we succeeded in getting in most of our wounded and covering over some of our dead. I was able to stand up to it all, mother dear, by Divine Providence I am sure, and live to fight again. You have lost one of your boys, mother, and you may lose another, but we are not afraid to die, and we shall all meet again where wars shall be no more."

"How can men die better than facing fearful odds for the ashes of his fathers and the temples of his gods? and for his mother, wife, children, and friends? This is the place to die, mother dear, if our turn comes. Men are dying here every moment, gladly dying because we fight that peace shall reign when we overcome our foes."

"When we went out under the fire of our artillery, I said to my section, 'Don't forget boys, mothers are praying for us tonight and we must win for them.' Most of the boys cheered."

"When I spoke to Mel he said that he was just twenty years of age now, and a boy no more. He was a man, mother dear. Remember him as a man, a great big man, who acted a man's part all through, and helped to win over two lines of Fritz's trenches. Good kid he was, and good kids get their rewards in heaven. We lost young Swan and Johnny McIlroy and hosts of others, but we will get them all back again. When we attack again, God-willing, we will win in a walk."

"Good night, mother dear. Here is a big kiss from Mel and me. I took it from Mel. He was wounded over and above the heart, and never knew he was ill. Good night again."

Pte. Melville Sinclair was just twenty years of age on August 3. William and he joined the 51st together, and together were drafted into a regiment of the Mounted Rifles, so that his brother was with him when he fell.
