Met in Rome.

Frederick Gleason, R. S. Barker, official secretary to the lieutenant governor, received a letter from his son, Capt. Theo. Barker, written at Rome, while he was en route to Constantinople with the Imperials. In the letter he said that he met an English speaking citizen of Rome, in the Grand Hotel, and the man asked him where he came from. Capt. Barker replied that he was from Fredericton, N. B., whereupon the man asked him if he knew Stuart Campbell, Stanley Bridges or Jasper Winslow. He said he knew these men and asked the stranger if he knew R. S. Barker, and the man, who gave his name as Murray, said he knew him well. Capt. Barker told Mr. Murray that R. S. Barker was his father, after which the gentleman showed him all the sights of the ancient city.

Know What He Wanted.

"I observe," said the manuscript collector, "that you write 'laughter' and 'applause' at intervals through your speeches."

"Yes," answered Senator Sarghoush, "I do so with no pretence to propriety, but merely as an evidence of my best intentions."—Washington Star.

A Special Favor.

"I can only be a sister to you." "Why—why—why?" "Now don't stutter. Plenty of girls wouldn't even care to be that."—Louisville Courier-Journal.
