EMPEROR OF GERMANY AS AN ARCHITECT.

Emperor William is the busiest man in Germany. President Roosevelt resembles him much, but the Kaiser is the more versatile of the two. If there is anything going on in the empire that the Kaiser does not find an opportunity to take a hack at, it has escaped the notice of those who watch him closely. He revises all public findings, supervises all architecture, lectures everybody and is a general all-around Little Father in every sense of the term.

When they want to illustrate his ceaseless activity as well as his restless power they tell the story of the star above the cross on the spire of the Emperor William Memorial Church. This is the tale as it is told: Of course, the Kaiser insisted on revising the plans of the church. That is one of his fondest prerogatives—revising everything and especially plans. The architect brought the plans to him, and the Kaiser scratched out what he didn't like and made such additions as he fancied before he gave them the imperial O. K. The church was built. There was to be a big, gilt cross on the spire, and it appeared in its proper place. But, much to the general astonishment, when the cross was put up, a large many-pointed gold star was raised above it, on a heavy rod. The Berliners could not understand the star. They inquired. The architect said the Kaiser had added the star to the plans. The plans were examined. Then it was found that in revising them, the Kaiser had let fall a drop of ink from his pen, which hit the paper just above the cross. The architect studied a long time over this blot of ink. His Teutonic mind grappled with the problem for weeks. There was no appeal. There could be no inquiries. He finally decided the blot of ink signified a star above the cross, and he put the star there, making it to correspond as nearly as possible with the outline of the blot. The star is still there.

A VISIT TO BISMARCK.

When at Kissingen, we were fortunate enough to make the "Iron Chancellor's" acquaintance. We dined with him at the old Schloss where he was living, its picturesque red roof making a landmark in the flat Bavarian scenery. We were only a party of six: the Prince and Princess, Count Herbert Bismarck and his wife (who was of English origin) and ourselves. We dined in a large room which had a vaulted ceiling, and seemed to be used as a general living room. At dinner I sat on one side of the Prince, and Randolph on the other, the huge bear hound, our host's constant companion, lying on the ground between us. Conversation was animated. Bismarck spoke excellent English, but very slowly, and if he could not find the word he wanted, he would pause and think until he did. His family looked up to him with awe and admiration, and listened with the greatest attention to every word he uttered. The old Princess, who seemed very feeble, did not take part in the conversation. After dinner we adjourned to another part of the room, where we sat round a long table covered with books and newspapers. There were a great many illustrated papers, full of caricatures of Bismarck, which, in answer to a question, he assured me he did not mind in the least. Later, however, Count Herbert contradicted this, saying that his father was really very sensitive and disliked being caricatured. Speaking of the country and the long walks he took daily, Bismarck said he loved nature, but the amount of life he saw awed him and that it took a great deal of faith to believe that an "all-seeing eye" could notice every living atom when one realized what it meant. "Have you ever sat on the grass and examined it closely?" There is enough life in one square yard to appall you," he said. When we were about to leave his great dog fixed his fierce eyes on mine in so persistent a manner that I became alarmed and thought he was going to spring upon me, but the Prince reassured me, saying, "He is looking at your eyes, because he has not seen any like them." This was said in a grave voice and without a smile, leaving it doubtful if he intended to pay me a compliment.—Mrs. George Cornwallis-West, in The Century.

RIPPING STYLES IN SHEATH GOWNS ALMOST GIVE THE RURAL FOLK FITS.

Miss Leggett Has Embarrassing Experience—Choir Girls

Tight Dress Amazes Congregation—Professor Finds

That Cleopatra Wore a Directoire Robe.

SHEATH GOWN RIPS: HOW SHOCKING!

TAYLOR'S CAMP, Pa., June 9.—Mrs. Jane Leggett, a comely young widow, figured yesterday in a most distressing accident, which was due primarily to a newfangled tight-fitting gown such as has become popular in Paris and the larger cities of this country.

Mrs. Leggett, who is a prominent member of the Civic Club, had been invited to visit a club meeting in a neighboring town and read a paper on "Raising Bread by Hand." Desiring to make a favorable impression, she ordered a new sheath gown.

She spent much time in decorating for the meeting, utterly regardless of the time table, indeed it lacked only four minutes of train time when she completed her toilet, and standing in front of the dressing glass, sweetly murmured, "Well, I guess that will hold the ladies for a little spell."

She heard the foot of the locomotive whistle and hastened to the station. Under ordinary conditions she could have made the train in season, but the clasp garment retarded free action and handicapped her.

Mrs. Leggett tripped several times to the exceeding great joy of envious women. She was almost a full block from the station when the train pulled in and since it remained only a minute Mrs. Leggett got excited.

In her agitation she made a longer step than she should have, and with a sigh and a rip the goods parted. She did not read the paper.

TIGHT FITS AN OLD EGYPTIAN STYLE.

HITTITE, Pa., June 9.—Professor Augustus Dobbie, the famous Egyptologist, has returned to his native town after two years' researches along the Nile. One of the most interesting discoveries announced is that the sheath gown was popular in the days of the Pharaohs.

Professor Dobbie brought back a fine assortment of mummies, among them one of the Princess Scynpi. Upon unwrapping the many enshrouding cloths he came to a gown that had a familiar appearance.

It was of fine texture and highly embroidered, but the most remarkable thing about it was the tight-fitting cut. The resemblance to the modern sheath gown was most striking.

The professor says that he has evidence which would tend to prove that at a later period in Egypt, the gown was worn by the women, and ancient records tend to show that the Queen of Sheba wore a gown of a similar fashion upon old King Solomon, and it also found a place in the outfit of Cleopatra.

The single, tight-fitting gown worn at the present day by eastern women is a modification of the same gown.

HELLO GIRLS CAN'T SIT AT THEIR WORK.

BOWLINE, Pa., June 9.—Several young women employed in the telephone exchange invested their savings in the new close fitting gowns, and now they are in distress because they cannot sit at the switchboards.

This is the most unpleasant feature about the dresses, and for working girls it really becomes a hardship to be in style.

The telephone operators are now compelled to remain on their feet during the greater part of the day, and when their duties are over they are thoroughly exhausted.

Remaining on their feet so long, more shoe leather is worn out, and this is an additional expense to the poor girls.

A few days ago a restaurant keeper thought it would improve business to equip his waitresses with the gowns. His judgment was excellent, and great crowds flocked to his place. Unfortunately he forgot that this rush also meant more haste. The girls were hampered so badly that they could not wait on the patron so that after a few hours' trial the owner ordered a return to the old attire.

SQUAW AMAZES HER NOBLE CHIEF.

RIP RAP, Pa., June 9.—When the Wild West show exhibited here a few days ago, Chief Never-The-Less, of the Shawnee tribe, saw a sheath gown for the first time in his life, and he was so filled with amazement that he could not take his eyes off the pretty girl who wore the outfit.

He manifested so much interest that his square, Fry-Your-Heart, grew jealous, and with persuasive words dragged him away to the family hearth, where she beat the noble chief with a tent stake.

Then when he was subdued, she became contrite and resolved to make amends. Procuring a horse blanket, Fry-Your-Heart cut it to resemble a sheath gown, and thus attired she strutted up and down in front of Never-The-Less.

At first he paid no attention to the proceeding, but by and by he began to look up. His eyes opened in horror. Gravely arising, he walked to one end of the tent, and picking up an old army overcoat, he threw it over his charming bride to make her look more respectable.

Since then, when he sees a sheath gown, he shows his displeasure by giving wild whoops.

CHOIR GIRL SHOCKS WOMEN WORSHIPPERS.

DRESSLERS, Pa., June 9.—Miss Mary Hensley, who sings in the choir of a local church, has had the finger of scorn pointed in her direction since last Sunday, when she appeared at the services wearing a sheath gown.

Miss Hensley is considered the prettiest girl in town, and one of the few capable of wearing the new style to advantage. She is tall and slender, but not too slender.

It was not noticed by the other women of the flock that Miss Mary was so up to date until she arose with the rest of the singers to render an anthem. Then the buzz of astonishment that swept over the church was audible and unanimous.

It was noticed that the persons who made the greatest protest during the following few days were the extreme stout dames. They talked, they arraigned, they condemned. And still they talked. They referred indefinitely to desecrating the house of worship.

Strangely, the young men of the congregation took sides with Miss Hensley, and they assured her of their hearty support.

But on the women's side the church is hopelessly divided, and a number of the women threaten to withdraw if Miss Mary is permitted to appear again in the tight-fitting gown.

The building committee of the Board of School Trustees met yesterday afternoon for the purpose of considering the report of Architect Nell Brodie on the cost of making the various school buildings safe in case of fire, in accordance with the recommendations made by the committee appointed by the Common Council. The building committee adopted the report, which is now in the hands of the Board of Public Safety.
