

nearer and more real to men and women who are walking on the dusty ways of common life. In Mrs. Sangster's dainty book, the appearances of angels recorded in the Scriptures form the theme of wholesome and encouraging meditations. There are sweet and tender words for the bereaved and broken-hearted, in the picture of lost loved ones as in that bright and blessed country from which the angels come. A closing chapter gives a practical turn to the whole volume, by exhibiting, as not the least beautiful angels, those who wear a human form and minister to the needs of others, in the home and other departments of everyday life. In these pages the lonely, the downcast, the troubled will find cheer and consolation, and the strong and capable, inspiration for unselfish service. Visions there are on these pages, but the writer is far from being a visionary.

The Keys of the Kingdom and Other Sermons. By R. J. Campbell, M.A., of the City Temple, London. The Fleming H. Revell Company, Toronto. 121 pages; price 50c. net.

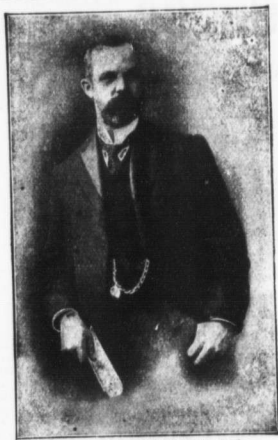

Mr. Campbell was called the other day "the leader of the Nonconformists in England." As the successor of Dr. Joseph Parker, he has become a very conspicuous figure in the religious world. This volume of sermons reveals him as a preacher of rare charm and power. They are marked by clearness and beauty of style, deep spiritual insight, and great felicity of illustration. The reader will find fresh and luminous interpretations of old and familiar texts.

Summer Songs in Idleness. By Katherine H. McDonald Jackson. William Briggs, Toronto. 71 pages; price $1.00, net.

The little volume contains first, a collection of poems, some longer and some shorter, in which love and nature, in its various phases, are the chief themes. The opening poem, which is the longest of all, touches the dark problem of suffering in the lower creation and in man, to find the solution in love. The second part is called "Sleepy Time Songs," and includes a number of delightful lullabies. Some of these have appeared in the KING'S OWNS AND JEWELS and the readers of these papers will be glad to see them in a more permanent form.

The Presbyterian Pulpit is the general title of a neat and attractive series of volumes of sermons by eminent American ministers, issued by the Presbyterian Board of Publication, Philadelphia, at a uniform price of 75c. per volume, which is excellent value. The first four volumes of the series, The Sinless Church, by Dr. George T. Purves; For Whom Christ Died, by Dr. William R. Richards; The Well by the Gate, by Dr. M. Woolsey Stryker; and From Love to Praise, by Dr. Herrick Johnson; contain, each, eight quite characteristic sermons. Some of the preachers have much more than local fame.

The Church Economist, published monthly by the Church Economist Publishing Company, New York, at a subscription price of $1.00 a year, is a valuable repository of up-to-date plans and methods in all the varied departments of modern church work.
