

No need of monuments of stone or bronze to commemorate peace between Canada and U.S.

A living vital fact -

Evidence in to-day's ceremonies; Perhaps most eloquent memorials of peace are old forts and ramparts along border, long since fallen into disuse, whose very ruins betoken mutual faith and confidence of two peoples;

To-day, the emblems of the peace and friendship which, happily, characterize our relations, are international parks and gardens, and great bridges and thoroughfares which serve to further the exchange of visits and commerce between our countries.
