

792
While it is true that Craig was absent without leave, I beg the court to consider the personal anxiety and worry placed upon this young chef, the difficulties in which he became involved and the fact that he returned, despite his wife's illness, immediately that he heard of Canadians in action in France, when he thought his services might be urgently required.