

along St. Mary's Bay, we come to Weymouth, a beautiful village on the Sissiboo river. Here cherries abound in their season, as well as in Digby, Bear River and intermediate places. St. Mary's Bay divides the county proper from Digby Neck, a long strip of land, bounded on the north by the Bay of Fundy settled by a thrifty and industrious population. The railway from Digby to Yarmouth, passes a few miles south of the shore of St. Mary's Bay. New farms are being brought into cultivation along the line of railway, but the most populous part of the county lies along the shore of St. Mary's Bay. This part of the county is settled by a very thrifty and intelligent population, nearly all French Acadians. For almost thirty miles the settlements constitute a continuous village. The people are progressive and well-to-do, with comfortable homes and surroundings. Every eight or ten miles there is a large church. On Church's Point is situate St. Anne's College, a valuable institution of learning in connection with the Roman Catholic faith, which is the religion of the French Acadians. There is also a convent here.

Digby county, although not strictly speaking an agricultural county, has, nevertheless, many well-to-do farmers. Farming, fishing and lumbering constitute the chief employments of the inhabitants, and between these three occupations a good living is assured and enjoyed.

From Digby by rail, we soon reach the beautiful and enterprising town of Yarmouth, the capital of the county of the same name, and the terminus of the Dominion Atlantic Railway; or if we follow the shore of St. Mary's Bay, we find thickly settled villages all the way to the town. The town of Yarmouth has the largest population of any town in the Province, with the exception of Halifax, and has always been
