Dry-Farming and the Congress

rado, Kansas, New Mexico and Wyoming in 1905 and 1906, and did considerable good. Its method of organization and its working plan were not popular, however, and its workers realized that a change was needed.

In the summer of 1906 a committee consisting of Jesse F. McDonald, then governor of Colorado; Williams, Donahue, Charles E. Wantland and W. E. R. Mills, met and formulated plans for a working body to be known as the Trans-Missouri Dry-Farming Congress, whose territory was to consist of the various dry-farming states west of the Missouri River. Gov. McDonald shortly issued a call for a convention to be held at Denver in late February, 1907. The active work of preparation was placed in the hands of C. C. Williams and Arthur Williams, the latter then secretary of the Denver Chamber of Commerce.

Plans were made for a three days' convention and for not more than 200 delegates. Those who attended the first session in the convention hall of the Albany Hotel vividly recall the rise in the price of standing room. On the second day the congress was moved to the First Baptist Church, on Stout Street, with a seating capacity of 1,500, and the crowds filled that, the convention being lengthened from three to four days by popular vote of the delegates themselves.

The late Fisher Harris, then secretary of the Salt Lake City Commercial Club, was made president of the new organization. For some reason it languished, and the second session of Salt Lake was smaller and less important than the first at Denver. John T. Burns, of Denver, was made secretary at the second Congress and has continued since as the executive secretary.

An Auxiliary of Farm Women

Then came the Cheyenne meeting in the winter of 1908-9, held in a blizzard, but attended by representatives of foreign governments and recognized by agricultural colleges and the United States department of agriculture. Here the name was changed to the International Dry-Farming Congress. Eight months later, at Billings, Mont., came the great gathering that fixed the standing of the congress as the largest convention held in the West each year. At Spokane, Wash., in 1910, this standing was emphasized by the attendance of more than 2,000 delegates, a vast exposition of dry-farmed products and a program of scientific agricultural discussions that caught the attention of the thinking world.

Last year the Congress was held at Colorado Springs, Colo., upwards of 2,500 visitors thronging that city, and it was one of the most successful and educational gatherings ever held. The exhibition tents were two blocks long, and the exhibits of dry-farmed products were both interesting and instructive. Canada; and especially the province of Alberta, carried off most of the silverware and implement prizes.

At this Congress the farm women organized, and that auxiliary is proving one of the best features of the work, in that it is educating the housewife to conserve labor and strength, minimize the farm work while obtaining better results, improving the conditions of the home, and the education of the children—in fact, carrying out in detail that work which conduces to make farm life pleasanter and the farm home most cheerful, bringing health and happiness to all in rural communities.
