REPORTING THE SERMON

A kilted regiment, while on the march in a part of Scotland, halted for a Sunday of rest at a remote village in the Highlands, and some of the braw laddies were billeted on the inhabitants.

One old lady had to find a lodging for two of the soldiers, Sandy and Tam, and she was delighted to know they were going to the kirk in the evening. She herself was unable to go, and her pleasure increased when one of her guests, who happened to be an accomplished writer of shorthand, promised to tell her everything the minister said in his sermon—although she had her doubts as to how he would be able to remember it all.

The two "kilties" came back from church, and Sandy read the sermon from his notebook to the admiration and astonishment of his landlady, who had never heard of shorthand and could not understand how anyone could write as fast as the minister spoke.

When Sandy had finished and the good lady had expressed her thanks for the privilege of hearing the sermon, she asked to let her look at the book he had been reading from. She seemed much disappointed, however, because she could make nothing of it.

At last, after a close inspection of the mystic signs, she said to the blushing warrior:

"You're a grand laddie and a verra gude reader, but I must tell ye, and if I was your ain mither I wad hae to admit it, ye're the verra wurst writer I ever came across."

NEW BRUNSWICK HAD MANY TOURISTS IN 1922

During the summer of 1922 the Province of New Brunswick welcomed a greater host of tourist travellers than it had experienced since the days before the war. By the 1st of October it was estimated that more than thirty thousand tourists passed through the city of St. John alone by boat, train and motor and up to that time more than five thousand automobiles from foreign points had registered at this first New Brunswick city. The year 1922 marked the resumption of holiday traffic on a scale more akin to the annual pilgrimage before the breakout of the war, and 1923 is expected to exceed this substantially and set up a new record for the Maritime Province.—Financial Post

HOME INFLUENCES

A certain minister in the U. S. A. probably to create a little diversion on the usual run of things, arose and denounced the home as a greater source of inspiration for ill-doing than the movies, theatres, dancing and many other institutions of entertainment that so often come under the denouncement of reformers. And who can say, he is wholly wrong. Each of us, or rather most of us, can recall homes we know of that are no fit place in which to rear children. It is natural and one of the laws of nature and evolution that the young of any species will learn the rudiments of life from their parents and imitate them in all they do. It is indeed a precocious youngster who will call his parents to account for breaking either the laws of society, the land, or of God. Children of immature age look upon their parents as most worthy examples to follow. They hold that what is good for their elders is good for them, and that what is allowed their parents is permissible for them. People who will acknowledge that the only sin in thievery is being caught, who look upon bootlegging, smuggling and such crimes as a game of wits and deserving of special credit when successfully carried out: who believe it is cheaper to move than to pay rent, and easier to go dirty than to keep clean—these kind of people are teaching, by example, their mischievous creed to all the younger generation who come in proximity to their presence. While a portion of the children raised in good homes, and having for example parents who live exemplary lives occasionally drift into bad company, those who see naught but the sordid, base things of life and know no other, are almost sure to grow into unstable citizens with the false idea that the world owes them a living, that honesty, integrity and decency are only the inspiration of spineless weaklings, and whose motto is: "What the world doesn't know won't hurt it." Children whose parents divorce and re-marry as the mood takes them will grow up to look upon marriage as a bond easily broken, and as legalized relationship instead of a divine union.

Children whose parents break what laws they can without running foul of the law will become calloused to the evils of life and be void of those qualities necessary to make good citizens and progenitors of the human race. Etiquette and politeness, forbearance, kindness and love, honesty and integrity are built on the foundation of a good home. A bad home life will surely leave its indelible mark on the new generations. The home is the greatest institution of the present age and most powerful in its sway for good or evil.

CHAUNCEY DEPEW FINDS LIFE IS WORTH LIVING

Chauncey M. Depew, in an American Telephone radio address in New York recently, gave these secrets of longevity and happiness:

"As a guide I have made the following rules which have carried me in mental and physical health to within three months of 89 years of age:

"We pass this way but once. We cannot retrace our steps to any preceding milestone. Every time the clock strikes it is both the announcement of the hour which we are entering and the knell of the one which is gone. Each night memory balances the books and we know before we sleep whether the result is on the right or wrong side of our account.

"The older we grow the more we realize that life is worth living. We think too little of the fun there is in it. We are too parsimonious of laughter. We do not appreciate as we ought the man or the woman who can make us forget while we are amused. We cannot help the past and that man is a fool who lives in it. To-day is a better day than yesterday.

"The secrets of happiness and longevity, in my judgement, are to cherish and cultivate cheerful, hopeful and buoyant spirits. If you haven't them, create them. Enjoy things as they are. The raggedest person I ever saw was a Turkish peasant standing in the field, clothed in bits of old carpet. He was laughing hilariously at our well clothed party. The combination of color and humor made him a thing of beauty, if not a joy forever.

"Let us never lose our faith in human nature, no matter how often we are deceived. Do not let deceptions destroy confidence in the real, honest goodness, generosity, humanity and friendship that exists in the world. They are overwhelmingly in the majority."

SELECTING BREEDERS FOR EGG PRODUCTION

As the time approaches when the breeding pens will have to be mated it becomes necessary to give careful attention to this, the most important work of the season.

The male selected should be one who is the son not only of a high laying hen, but of a hen having the power to transmit the quality to her daughters. When after careful study of records, it has been decided to use a male from a certain pen, the next point is selection of a promising specimen. Try to maintain size in the flock by choosing a bird of near standard weight as possible. More important still however is it to select a bird with constitutional vigour—one with a broad back and with the width carried well back to the tail, and having also a good depth of body. The head—and this is most important, because the vigour of the bird is expressed in his head and eye—should be clean-cut, free from coarseness, and with the face clear of wrinkles. The eye should be prominent and piercing.

To such a male mate the requisite number of females. This will depend on the breed and the conditions under which the birds are being kept. For American breeds such as the Plymouth Rock or Wyandotte from ten to twelve will make a satisfactory pen. For Mediterranean breeds, such as the Leghorn, about fifteen females may be used; but in all cases where the breeders have free range a larger number of females may be used.

Yearling hens make ideal breeders, but older hens or well developed pullets will also give excellent results. In selecting these birds also keep constitutional vigour in mind. Select those birds having capacity, as evinced in long, broad and deep bodies. Frequently a bird may be deficient in one of these dimensions, i. e., it may be a little short in the back; but if it is broad and carries the width well back to the tail, and shows a good depth, it may make up in extra breadth and depth, what it lacks in length.

Here, again, as in the male, the head is most important. The clean-cut face and prominent piercing eye are the marks of vigour and productivity.

NOT WHAT TEACHER MEANT

A teacher asked her class the meaning of the word "furlough."
 Jack was called up, and said, "It means a mule; it says so in a book."
 The teacher a ked for the book and at last Jack came with the book which had a picture of a soldier sitting on a mule.

UNITED FRUIT COMPANIES DUST PRICES 1923

It has always been the policy of the United Fruit Companies to supply the highest quality of dust at the lowest price possible. When we first went into the dust business, dust was selling at $11.50 per 100 lbs in the Annapolis Valley. We steadily lowered this price until last year we sold Bordeaux dust at $6.00, and 90-10 sulphur arsenate dust at $7.00, delivered to the farmer. Consistent with this policy we are again pleased to announce a further price reduction, a reduction which is only made possible because of the large scale upon which we are now operating.

Prices (retail to the farmer from every local company).

Bordeaux Dust, per 100 lbs.	$4.75
90-10 sulphur-lead arsenate dust, per 100 lbs.	6.00
Straight superfine dusting sulphur, per 100 lbs.	3.70

Prices on other mixed dusts may be had on application, and are proportionately low.

The Bordeaux dust is of the same strength as last year, being composed of 12 lbs dehydrated copper sulphate, 8 lbs. arsenate of lime, and 80 lbs hydrated lime, or in other words a little over 4% metallic copper and a little over 2% metallic arsenic. This dust is little more than half the retail price of the same dust of the same strength sold by any other concern in America according to all the price lists now available.

The sulphur-lead arsenate dust is about two-thirds the price at which the same material may be bought in any other district.

The above dust mixtures are all standard dusts thoroughly tried and tested and well known in all American fruit growing areas, and it is consequently with much pride that we announce ourselves as pioneers in setting new low price standards on high quality materials.

We were early approached with regard to handling the new dusts known as "green dust" and "brown dust", which are dusts containing copper and arsenic in different forms from the regular Bordeaux, and in consequence we obtained from the Dominion Entomological Laboratory at Annapolis all the information and experimental figures relating to these new dusts. From an examination of this data we found:

1. That the "green dust" gave a very poor control of apple scab.
2. That the "brown dust" gave a control of apple scab on an average a little poorer than our regular Bordeaux dust.
3. That both these dusts were heavy materials and that it took nearly half as much again of these dusts, as compared with our regular Bordeaux dust, to cover the same area of orchard.

From the above we could only come to the conclusion that these dusts were not only of lower quality than we desired, but also that they would be very expensive for an orchardist to use, and consequently that the handling of these dusts would not be consistent with the United Fruit Companies policy of low cost and high quality.

We were further warned by the Provincial Entomologist in his speech before the Fruit Growers Association against the danger of changing from proven materials, to materials about which little was known. On the same occasion the officer in charge of the Dominion, Entomological Laboratory stated that these new dusts were in some respects defective, were only in an experimental stage, and had not stood the test of time. These statements served to confirm us in our opinion, and in view of the low prices at which it was possible for us to supply standard dusts, the handling of these new dusts appeared to us the height of business folly.

We are informed from our Entomological advisers that it is possible that future experiments may find methods for improving and overcoming the defects of these new green and brown dusts. We are keeping ourselves informed on any developments of this nature, and are ourselves participating in factory experiments with this end in view. In the event of such new methods being found we will be in a position to manufacture and supply green or brown dust at a retail price of about $4.00 per 100 lbs.

The above is written to explain the policy of the United Fruit Companies, which is to only supply the best quality dusts at the lowest price possible, to handle no materials which have not proven their value in the hands of impartial experimenters, but at the same time to keep in touch with all new developments so that when sufficient is known about them they may be utilized for the benefit of all the farmers and not for the benefit of any private exploiters.
