And I have lived to see and hail Another NINTH DAT OF OCTOBER To re-peruse life's checquer'd tale, With ruminations calm and sober. This is the fire and forticth time My natal day has deign'd to trace me : And now within a far, strange clime The shadows of the past embrace me.

MY BIRTII DAY.

The past is gone-and yet its dreams Are fondly fluttering before me; Its joys', and toves', and friendships' gleoms Like Northern lights are flitting o'er me. Anon a dark, a gloomy clould Comes o'er the sunshine of my gladness; And young love's tomb and friendship's shrou Surround me with the pall of sadness.

The memories of my own lov'd land, The spirits of youth's joyful morning ; The bounding heart-the helping hand, Affection's matron tones of warning ; The hill-the glen-the stream-the grow The moonlit eve-the virgin blushes-The vow-the kiss-the dream of love. One mournful week before me rushes. I've liv'd, and lov'd, and hop'd, and sigh'd,

Have borne the buffetings of passion; Have bought with folly, and defied The frowns and sneers of giddy fashion " My head is grey, but not with years," 'Tis silver'd o'er with toil and sorrow ; Regret, deep thought, and griefs, and fears, Have wreath'd my brow with many a fu

I have not cringed before the proud, I've brav'd the bigot and oppressor, I've scorn'd the vices of the crowd, And dared the haughty bold aggressor frown of wealth-the sneer of pride May greet me, but can ne'er undo me, My poverty grows side by side, And like my age, clings closer to me.

And yet I'm gay-I feel alive, My heart is full of faith and feeling. Almost as warm at forty-fice, As when youth's passions all were thrilling Of holy friendship still is near me, While voices from my own lov!d land At intervals are sent to cheer me.

Tis true, youth's hallow'd scenes are gone. And youth itself is gone for ever : But fancy hears sweet Garnock's tone In murmurs of the Maitland river ;

And while these birth-day husings gather I'll pay, on each returning year,

MEETING OF PARLIAMENT

The Official Gazette of Saturday last announced ces the formal prorogation of Parliament to the 16th proximo, but it is understood that it will be called together for the despatch of business on or about the 20th of the same month. The present Session will be the most important that the Parliament of Canada has yet held, whether we regard the number and character of the public measures to be brought forward, or the industry and ability exerted in their prepara-

There has been a mighty amount of ruus, and running to and fro on one of those abortions of nature which are ironically called "Gentlement" It appears that the cally called "Gentlemen!" It appears that the animal had been missing at feeding time, which was the polly occassion on which his importance could be felt; and a strict search was immediately set on foot, but up to the moment of going to press the search has been unavailing. He was an ultra loyalist, and would even have celebrated and honored her Majesty's birth-day by getting to the moment. His vanity was conspicution to be send; and honored her Majesty's birth-day by getting to the constant of the window, that he might look upon for the window, that he might look upon is garden, and gladden his eyes with the sight of nature. How ardent an admirer he was of nature, is poetically told in "Zimerman's Solitude."

Barricades were erected by the operatives who attacked the troops, but Irrial-and yet it is strongly suspected that he has d'ann xed" himself to the neighbouring Republic, after first having annexed to his own person a few hundred pounds of honest people's money! ## GOVERNMENT DEBENTURES.

In looking over the official Gazette, we find that the number of Debentures, issued by the Government appears to increase, with every publication of the Issue. This has induced us to take the subject into consideration. Matters of this kind should be discussed, without reference to the party that proposes them; for of all the delicate points, the financial department of the coun-try is the most delicate; and a country may try is the most delicate; and a country may openedly be ruined by an imprudent act in this department. We do not conceive that it is the object of the Conservative Press or the party either, to do anything in opposition that would lead to the injury of the Province, merely because the act proposed, emanated from the ranks of our opponents; such opposition we should denominate factious. It is for this reason that we sit down in calculus consider the proposity or improsuch opposition we should denominate lactions. It is for this reason that we sit down to calmly consider the propriety, or impropriety of the step taken by the present Government, in issuing Debentures.

It is our opinion after mature reflection that the Government has done right. Demands of a pressing nature were made upon it, and the Government was compelled to meet them:—The Provincial Chest was exhausted,—the Government could not allow itself to be declared Bankrupt, it must prepare to meet pressing necessities. In such page to meet pressing necessities. In such a case it was compelled to resort to its credit; and it did not come into the Market with its Debentures, unsustained by certain prospects, for their redemption at maturity.

This being the case, we conceive that the public interests have been better studied by certain prospects, and it did not come into the Market between the two houses is about two n.ijes. half a mile of the road being a track through the wood. Last Saturday she left home the first process of the construction of the road being a track through the wood. Last Saturday she left home the first process of the construction of the road being a track through the wood. Last Saturday she left home the first process of the road being a track through the wood. Last Saturday she left home the first process of the process public interests have been better studied by the issue of the Debentures, than by a declaration on the part of the Government that it was without available fund or resources, and that the public creditor must seek his remedy, the best way he could, for that the Government could not meet its engagements. This latter step was to be avoided under every censideration, and really the simple course of issuing these Debentures, bearing interest, does not anyear to us to simple course of issuing these Debentures, bearing interest, does not appear to us to possess any very serious objections under the circumstances. We have no hesitation in saying, that had not the Govern-ment done as it has, or had it not made evethe cereumstances. We have no nesitation in saying, that had not the Government done as it has, or had it not made every effort to sustain the credit of the Province, and to pay those who needed their pay, we should not have been backward in determined the spinal cord, the upper section of the ters of a mile from her father's house, near founcing them. In fact this action of the Government, has been but an effort to make the duties upon imports and other sources of our revenue available before they were collected.

We have seen it stated by some writers, that these Debentures soon become of a depreciated value. This could only have been effected in our opinion, by misrepresentations to the holders. For surely the Government are receiving them in payment, as well as paying with them, and certainly as a secure investment, they are equal to any stock, and at least as easily convertible into cash. What shop keeper, what trader would refuse them at par, in payment of a debt, and certainly Debentures, or obligations which can be so applied, cannot be a vicious currency; but in default of other, must be deemed serviceable and good. Wo can see no reason why these Debentures or Notes, should not pass current at par; seeing that they daily increase in value, and we should be loth to suppose that the was any reason for proposing a discount upon them, under any circumstances. In short we think the Government was fully warranted in issuing the Debentures.—Belleville Intelligencer, (Tory.)
