The Tenderfoot Farmer

It was one of these experimental farmers, who put green spectacles on his cow and fed her shavings. His theory was that it didn't matter what the cow ate so long as she was fed. The questions of digestion and nourishment had not entered into his calculations. It's only a "tenderfoot" farmer that would try such an experiment with a cow. But many a farmer feeds his self regardless of digestion and nutrition. He might almost as well eat shavings for all the good he gets out of his food. The result is that the stomach grows "weak," the action of the organs of digestion and nutrition are impaired and the man suffers the miseries of dyspepsia and the agonies of nervousness.

To strengthen the stomach, restore the activity of the organs of digestion and nutrition and brace up the nerves, use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is an unfailing remedy, and has the confidence of physicians as well as the praise of thousands healed by its use.

In the strictest sense "Golden Medical Discovery" is a temperance medicine. It contains neither intoxicants nor narcotics, and is as free from alcohol as from opium, cocaine and other dangerous drugs. All ingredients printed on its outside wrapper.

Don't let a dealer delude you for his own profit. There is no medicine for stomach, liver and blood "just as good" as "Golden Medical Discovery."

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

"And so she's going to marry THAT man," said the little stenographer lady, "that little effeminate, soft-voiced sissy—after all the chances she's had."

We had just read the announcement of the neighborhood belle's engagement in the evening paper.

"I don't wonder a bit," said the lady-who-always-knows-somewhat. "I think he's just the kind of a man a woman always falls in love with."

"What is the kind of a man women always fall in love with?" asked the writer-man. "I often make all the ladies in my story go daffy over one man or another, but story ladies have to do what I tell them, and I'll be hanged if I could pick out the man that real live ladies will fall in love with. The only thing I can be sure of is that they won't like the man you'd think they would. There's Oglethorpe, for instance, one of the best men the Lord ever made and women run from him as if he had the pest."

"Why do you always pick out some perfect stick to call 'the best man the Lord ever made,' inquired Molly. 'I'd as soon marry a hitching post as Mr. Oglethorpe.'"

"Why?" demanded the writer-man. "Oh, because," explained Molly succinctly.

"Well, what kind of a man do women like best?" pursued the writer-man. "You ladies must know. Tell me."

"A man with good, broad shoulders," said Molly.

"The man who always gives up his seat in a street car when women are standing," said the lady-who-always-knows-somewhat.

"The man who never talks about other women," I contributed.

"The man who keeps his nails well manicured, and says 'Good morning' when he comes in to the office, and takes off his hat in an elevator," suggested Molly.

"The man who is good to his mother and takes his sisters around sometimes," added the lady-who-always-knows-somewhat.

"The man who doesn't treat you half way decently," put in the writer-man, "A woman and a dog and a hickory tree—the more you beat them the better they be," you know."

"Why, I wonder, does it improve a hickory tree?" mused Molly.

"If that isn't just like a woman," growled the writer-man.

"But why?" persisted Molly.

"Never mind," said the writer-man with dignity. "You are distracting us from the main issue."

"If that isn't just like a man," mimicked Molly.

"Children," said the lady-who-always-knows-somewhat, "cease your quarrelling and listen to my nice plan. We'll ask Ruth to ask the great public."

"Bully," said the writer-man.

"Lovely," cooed Molly.

So will the great public please consider itself asked:

What sort of a man do women like best?

If you'll kindly contribute your ideas on this subject we'll have a symposium some day. Only remember there are a lot of you and make them short—not more than a hundred words.

Your individual observation must have taught you each something on the subject. Won't you share it?

some of the milk. This quite changes the flavor of the dish.

Butternuts make as delicious filling for dates as anything to be found. A candy made of maple sugar and butternuts cannot be excelled.

Never use sandsoap on paint. Wipe off with a cloth dipped in thick suds of white soap and rinse with a clean cloth wrung from hot water.

If a pig is to be roasted, let it lie for a quarter of an hour in cold water before stuffing, and then carefully wipe it out with a soft cloth.

A Born Adventurer.

Lord Hardwicke Has Knocked About All Over the World.

The possessor of an iron will, invincible courage, and a splendid physique, this is Lord Hardwicke, who has recently completed his forty-first year. His lordship has traveled in all parts of the world, and as a practical mining engineer and yachtsman, he is as well known and respected in the United States and Australia as he is in Great Britain.

Starting out to earn his "bread and cheese" as a Stock Exchange clerk, Lord Hardwicke soon went prospecting and mining in Western Australia and the States, where he spent many years, and, incidentally, picked up many stories.

One of his best relates to a gunner of the Garrison Artillery, who had successfully passed an armorer's course. He was at home on furlough, wearing the usual decoration of the hammer and pincers on his right sleeve, when he was accosted by a civilian, who asked what the decoration signified. "Oh," replied Tommy facetiously, "I'm a qualified army dentist."

"I see," said the civilian. "Of course, the pincers are for extracting the teeth, but what is the idea of a hammer?"

"Well, you see," rejoined the soldier, "some of the chaps are a bit nervous, and are afraid to take chloroform, so as a substitute we use the hammer to knock them unconscious with."

Like so many titled families, the Yorkes, owe their elevation to a man of law. The first Earl of Hardwicke was Lord Chancellor, and had several sons, the second of whom, Charles, was in due course also made Chancellor, probably the only instance on record where both father and son have reached that high office.

There is a tragic story attached to Charles Yorke's elevation to the Wool-sack. Although his ambition had been fixed on this appointment from his earliest years, he, on the resignation of Lord Camden, was offered the Great Seal, but on account of a pledge he had given to his political friends, declined it.

But George III. sent for him, and after two interviews Yorke left his sovereign with the Great Seal in his possession. Three days later he was found dead, just as the patent conferring the title of Baron Morden upon him was being completed.

Indigestion & Dyspepsia

In all its forms can be cured. It is quite a daily occurrence to hear persons say: Oh, what a feeling of distress I have after meals, fullness of the stomach, heaviness and headache, I feel too tired to do anything, I have no heart to exert myself and at times I care for nothing. I often have a pain in the pit of my stomach, no appetite, my heart beats rapidly on the slightest exertion. I feel just as tired when rising in the morning as when retiring to bed. My sleep is often disturbed, and I often awake with a sense of suffocation and a difficulty of again going to sleep. I have to be careful of what I eat, and my life seems a veritable burden.

Now, it seems a shame and a pity for persons to be suffering like that when it is in their power to get cured by taking a Bottle of Dr. Stafford's Prescription A. A sure cure for persons afflicted with stomach troubles. It can be obtained at
