The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

It reminded me, said the lady-who-always-knows-something, a maid I had when I was first married said to me. The lady-who-always-knows-something had been in to call on a neighbour of ours who had just come back from a long visit. She had been telling us how enthusiastic this woman's daughter was at her return, and how she could not seem to do enough for her mother. This was a new character for the daughter. She has the reputation of being a decidedly selfish girl who lets her mother wait on her by inches and rewards her with rudeness and impatience. We expressed our interest as to what the girl's spasm of exuberant appreciation reminded the lady-who-always-knows-something of, and the lady went on: "It was one time when I was housecleaning. I wanted to get everything clean together for once, and I'd been working hard enough to kill myself and I just gave out and had to go to bed. I had a jolly little Irish girl just over, for a maid, and when she brought me up my tea that night she said, 'Sure, darlint, I think ye'll have to be after doing your cleaning more like the robins feed their young.'

"And how is that?" I said.

"A little at a time and oftener," she explained.

"A little at a time and oftener?"

How many things that would simplify besides housecleaning.

How often we try to pay debts of kindness or gratitude in a lump—at Christmas time, perhaps—when the payment could so much better be made "as the robins feed their young."

How often we try to make up for months of some neglected duty in a day or two, when the only real way to atone is "as the robins feed their young."

The world outdoors has many lessons for us. Animal and vegetable life have many wise words to say to us of serenity, of patience and of self-control. If we will but listen.

But few, I think, are wiser than the robin's lesson as translated by the little Irish girl.

Grant us in this impatient life to still remember that there are many things which can best be done "as the robins feed their young, a little at a time and oftener."

Do You Feel This Way?

Do you feel all tired out? Do you sometimes think you just can't work away at your profession or trade any longer? Do you have a poor appetite, and lay awake at nights unable to sleep? Are your nerves all gone, and your stomach too? Has ambition to force ahead in the world left you? If so, you might as well put a stop to your misery. You can do it if you will. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will make you a different individual. It will set your lazy liver to work. It will set things right in your stomach, and your appetite will come back. It will purify your blood. If there is any tendency in your family toward consumption, it will keep that dread destroyer away. Even after consumption has almost gained a foothold in the form of a lingering cough, bronchitis, or bleeding at the lungs, it will bring about a cure in 98 per cent. of all cases. It is a remedy prepared by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., whose advice is given free to all who wish to write him. His great success has come from his wide experience and varied practice. Don't be wheedled by a penny-grabbing dealer into taking inferior substitutes for Dr. Pierce's medicines, recommended to be "just as good." Dr. Pierce's medicines are of known composition. Their every ingredient printed on their wrappers. Made from 1903 without alcohol. Contains no habit-forming drugs. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

Fads and Fashions.

Hat crowns may be high or low; the majority of hats showing high crowns are narrow of brim, a feature which emphasizes the height.

There is a great feeling for having all dress accessories to match, even the hand-bags following the fashion and the uppers of shoes as well as the stockings.

For elegant day dresses white embroidered nets are fashionable, the skirts being very chic when finished with a band of black net, touched in white.

For children little coats of taffeta are in vogue. A pretty little model of dark navy blue silk has collar and cuffs of brighter blue, edged with silver buttons.

Pale-colored parasols are much seen in lace or plaited mouseline de soie, edged with a wide silk border, or with one of flowered pompadour ribbon, or of black velvet.

Very thick rouleaux of satin finish the waists of one-piece dresses and are twisted and arranged as ornaments at the top of the back panel, usually fastened at the side.

Pierrot millinery shapes in velvet, scratch beaver or French felt with high round-topped crowns and slightly rolled brims will be a popular feature of this fall's millinery.

The loose panels which finish so many of the newest skirts are caught up at one side with a pretty ornament near the hem. At the top flat and perfectly narrow lines still prevail.

Broderie de laine or woolen embroidery is still in strong favor. Crocheted flowers, ranging from the tin rose forms to immense roses, or poppies, are used on girdles, hats, umbrellas and bags.

Long chains, hitherto referred to as fan-chains, but now called coat chains because they are generally worn over the outer garment, are obtainable in the fashionable cut crystal of the hour and are charmingly beautiful.

Very few feather wraps or scarves are now worn in the evening. They are replaced by voluminous scarves of painted gauze or mouseline, or, if the night is fresh, by lovely double ermine stoles, with no black tails in them.

In neckwear the the prominent French novelties are flecked in Marie Antoinette and Charlotte Corday styles and the one-sided effects in jabots. These jabots are noted as the finishing touches on the costumes of the most smartly-dressed women.

Laces are being worn on everything—densely laced dresses, afternoon and evening gowns. And the laces are arranged in such ways that they give a very elaborate effect. As an example, Venise lace is worn "flat" over black or a bright color.

In millinery many turban shapes are noted with upright or coronet brims of almost every dimension and design, many of which extend around only part of the crown, while in others the ends of the applied coronet brim, usually of different heights, overlap.

Some of the silk walking suits show unusual trimmings. The collars and cuffs are braided and fringed with linen or raffia. Striped silks are used for pipings. Tortoise-shell buttons are used and the application of string and yarn in embroidery is one of the dominant features.

Wide braids are expected to have a very prominent place this fall. The latest novelties include braids woven in a mixture of one of the fashionable vivid colors with black. Many are in sombre effect, combining two tones of one color, while others combine the color that are formed in the new fashionable rough suitings and tweeds.

Cecil Amendments Lost

VETO BILL GETS ON.

"Home Rule" is the Fear of the Unionists—Churchill Hints at the King Favoring It.

London, Aug. 8.—Lord Cecil's motion that consideration of the Bill be postponed was rejected 348 to 209, and a motion to commence consideration of the Lords' amendment to the veto bill was agreed to.

Sir Edward H. Carson, in the debate, devoted himself to the home rule phase of the situation, and promised the Government that their intention of passing a home rule bill by force would be resisted by force. "The home rule contest will be settled by Balfour and not by Westminster," he said.

At one point Carson nearly caused an outbreak by referring to Mr. Asquith's communication to Mr. Balfour on the subject of the King's guarantee as "a blackmailing letter." The Speaker let it pass.

Home Secretary Churchill followed, strongly deprecating the resort to disorder and riot advocated by Cecil and Carson saying:—

"There are 70,000 dockers on strike at this moment in London. Some of them are hungry. Should some of them who are suffering break out in riot, you would be the first to ask that soldiers be sent to the scene."

King and Home Rule.

Mr. Churchill also stated that when the Ministers conferred with the King in November in regard to guarantee, he was made fully acquainted with all matters in dispute between the parties, "among which Home Rule was one of the most important." The impression which the speaker evidently sought to convey was that the King was in favor of Home Rule for Ireland.

Lords' Amendments.

Proceeding to deal with the Lords' amendments to the veto bill, the Home Secretary announced the minor concessions which the Government was prepared to make. They had concluded that in order to lighten the burden of the Speaker in deciding the character of bills, to determine if they were purely financial measures or otherwise, he should consult the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means and the chairman of the Committee on Public Accounts. Could also be adopted providing for the exclusion of provisional orders—bills from the term "public bills"; and a new clause providing that no extension of the duration of the life of a parliament beyond the prescribed five years could be made. In advising the rejection of the other amendments made by the House of Lords, and referring to the suggestion that the Protestant succession should be safeguarded by referendum, Mr. Churchill sarcastically remarked:—"We do not stand in need of any Jacobean or Napoleonic device of this sort, or even of a Venetian plan of a tribunal of superior persons."

How to Keep Cool.

Muscular exercise—as little as possible. Rest and sleep—as much as possible. Digestible foods—only a sufficient quantity. Indigestible foods—sufficient for bulk. Cold drinks—with care and moderation as to temperature and quantity. Hot sun—a minimum amount. Shade—a maximum amount. Air in motion—enough for comfort. Cold baths—not overdone. Clothing—light shades, and light weight.
