A Word in Season.

Autumn sighs and Winter answers; in a haze the landscape swims; and the trees, like ballet dancers, shock us with their naked limbs; witted are the leaves and curly, when they leave them the lawn;

let us do our shopping early, ere the Christmas rush is on. Now and then the winds are equally and they fill the human droves with a pensive melancholy as they whistle through the groves; for there's nothing sadder, bleaker, than the message of the wind: "Winter comes, with patent shrieker, sunny days are all behind!" Winter comes, and, rude and burly, he will yell, "Oh, mortal spawn, rise and do your shopping early, ere the Christmas rush is on!" I have seen at early morning ice upon the crystal streams; frost the bushes is adorning, like a diadem it gleams; I have seen the lonesome robin shiver as it piped his song; I have sympathized with Dobbin, for his hair's all pointed wrong. Every sign and every token whispers in my shrinking ear: "Autumn's spine is surely broken, winter days will soon be here!" Which is why, I'm sore and surly, as I sigh at early dawn: "I must do my shopping early, ere the Christmas rush is on!"

Trophy Gained by Britain in Battle Restored to Russia.

The recent visit of the Russian fleet to Portland was marked by a curious incident, as the outcome of which Admiral von Essen, the Russian commander, says Reuter, is carrying back with him a venerated Ikon (sacred image or picture) of St. Alexander Nevsky, the patron saint of St. Petersburg, which has been in England nearly sixty years. The Ikon, moreover, is going back to Russia through the action of a Russian political refugee, a leading Radical member of the first Duma.

This Ikon belonged to the chapel of the garrison of Bermansund, a fort on one of the Aland Islands, in the Baltic, stormed by the united English and French forces on Aug. 28, 1854. It fell into English hands, was brought to England, changed owners several times, found its way into the shop of a Southampton firm of picture dealers, was bought by a collector as a fine specimen of Russian ecclesiastical paintings, and, finally, fell into the hands of M. Aladin, who emigrated to England, after the Anden closure of the first Russian Parliament, and is now living at Portsmouth.

Admiral von Essen was rather astonished when he received at Portland a letter from M. Aladin, informing him that the Ikon was in his possession, and that he wished to present it to the admiral "as an offering to the flagship Miklik, to be returned to its native land." The letter was written in English, not in Russian.

The Russian admiral felt himself in a position of some embarrassment.

How could he enter into official communication with a political refugee? The difficulty was got over by the despatch to Portsmouth of an officer in uniform, who came back with the Ikon which had been duly handed over to him.

The painting, which is on canvas, represents a handsome young warrior in an attitude of prayer with eyes uplifted. There is no signature, and the only indication of its history, on the picture itself is a much-faded pencilled inscription on the back, "Taken at Bermansund, 1854."

The Little Boy and His Dream.

The little boy smiled in his sleep that night.

As he wandered to Twilight Town; And his face lit up with a heavenly light.

Through the shadows that drifted down; But he woke next morning with tear-washed eyes and a heavy sigh.

In the light of the grey dawn's gleam; And out from the stillness we heard him cry—

"I've lost my dream—my dream!" And he told us then in his childish way.

Of the wonderful dream he'd known He had wandered away from the land of Play.

To the distant land of the Grown; He had won his share of the fame and fight.

In the struggle and toil of men; And he sobbed and sighed in the breaking light: "I want my dream again."

As the years passed by the Little Boy grew.

'Till he came to the land of the Grown; And the dream of his early youth came true—

The dream that he thought had flown; Yet once again he smiled in his sleep, Smiled on, till the grey dawn's gleam.

When those nearby might have heard him weep: "I want my dream—my dream!"

For he dreamed of the yesterdays of youth.

And the smile on a mother's face; A heart of old-time faith and truth In the light of an old-home place. He had won his share of the fame and fight.

In the struggle and toil of men— Yet he sobbed and sighed in the breaking light: "I want my dream again!"

Nurse's Years of Experience

Proves Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Best Treatment for Kidney and Stomach Troubles.

The trained nurse has even greater opportunities than the doctor himself to watch the action of medicine in specific cases. For years the writer of this letter has been recommending the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills among her patients, and is firmly convinced that no treatment is so prompt and effective. This is the most valuable evidence obtainable, and we believe that all who know Mrs. Duffy will appreciate it to the full, knowing that she would not recommend anything in which she had not the highest confidence. Mrs. Duffy, nurse, 35 Lewis street, Toronto, writes: "I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for years, and recommend them to my patients for all disorders of the kidneys, liver and stomach. In all my professional experience I have found nothing better." Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are sold in doses of one, two, and three pills, and are sold by all druggists or Edman's, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.
