Is Lloyd George
Coming Back?

Mr. Lloyd George's meteoric flight through Canada and the United States was in the nature of a triumph procession from beginning to end. The New World acclaimed the war veteran of the political stage of the Old World, and showed him the deference and regard that they might well have paid to a crowned head. There is no mistaking their intention to let him see that in him they recognized not only the Premier who had guided Britain's destiny through the most critical period in her history, but the man who had dominated Europe as well.

His absence from England, intentional or otherwise it is impossible to say, corresponded with the sitting of the Imperial Conference, a time when there was certain to be little or nothing happening in political circles, but much that might develop as a result of those discussions.

He arrived in England at the moment that the Conference closed. Had his plans been premeditated, he could not have chosen a more opportune time to land. Premier Baldwin had to all intents and purposes committed himself and his party to the policy of protection, at least to a sufficient extent to arouse the antagonism of the adherents of free trade. Whatever his intentions were—whether to propitiate the Dominion Premiers, or to find a way out of the unemployment problem—it is difficult to think that he took this course for political motives. He must have realized how strong would be the opposition in the country to the adoption of protection as a general principle, and that to introduce it on the eve of a general election was likely to make his chances of victory at the polls extremely hazardous.

Lloyd George saw in it his opportunity, and almost before his feet had touched the land his denunciation of the Premier's policy was being flashed to every corner of the country.

Everyone who has followed the career of this remarkable man knows him to be a past master in the art of politics, and that he possesses a consummate skill which approaches the mysterious in anticipating popular demands. Everyone realized when he was defeated in the last election that his political sun had by no means set, that his light for the time being was only obscured and that it would reappear with greater resplendency than before.

Lloyd George has political enemies in England, many of them. Even in the days when he was in undisputed sway, there were not lacking bitter opponents who withheld their criticisms, partly because it was not the time to arouse political animosity, and also because the people were heart and soul behind him. An adept in the game of politics, it was not by such methods that he won their confidence. He grasped the seriousness of the situation when others failed, and he not only gave the whole of his ability and energy to the vital question of providing men and munitions to defeat the enemy, but by his example as well as by his magnetism aroused the people to a supreme effort which brought success.

His extended tour, during which he is said to have made 70 addresses, would have caused an ordinary individual to take a long rest, but work to this indomitable "little Welshman" is only an incentive to greater efforts. With the dissolution of Parliament which is announced to take place to-day, he will immediately enter the lists with undiminished vigour, rejuvenated and refreshed by his strenuous labour overseas.

What Does
It Portend?

The announcement of the return, apparently by invitation, of the ex-Crown Prince of Germany, and the statement that the arch fiend, the ex-Kaiser, has also received his passport in order to come forth from exile in Dornum, have centred the eyes of the world upon Germany, and her next move will be awaited with interest. Germany, it would appear, has decided to violate the Treaty of Versailles in the spirit as well as in the letter, and in this receives encouragement from the lack of cohesion in the councils of the Allies.

The country is in such a state of chaos that her statesmen would be willing to adopt any plan which promised to restore unity, and if the re-establishment upon the throne of the Hohenzollerns were likely to effect it, her recently established Republican form of Government would come to an abrupt end. And then, what?

The Hon. Dr.
W. R. Warren.

We congratulate the Prime Minister of Newfoundland upon the honour conferred upon him by Edinburgh University, which in recognizing him in person, at the same time pays a graceful compliment to the country which he represents.

Wreath of Poppies

WREATH OF POPPIES PLACED ON SERGEANTS' WAR MEMORIAL

The Executive of the G. W. V. A. accompanied by Rev. T. Nangle, C.P., visited the Sergeants' Memorial, Garrison Hill, on Sunday, Armistice Day, at 11 o'clock, when a wreath of Poppies was placed on the Memorial by Vice-President Crocker, in the absence of President A. B. Baird. After the placing of the wreath the two minutes silence was observed by all present.

Highlanders Hold
Church Parade

The Newfoundland Highlanders, with pipes and drums, and under the command of Lieut.-Col. W. H. Herder, held a church parade Sunday morning, attending morning service at the Presbyterian Church. Owing to the inclemency of the weather a route march was out of the question and return to the Armory was made directly after the service.

CREW COMING HOME.—A message to Baine Johnson & Co. received from Capt. Forward late of the ship Jean Dundonald Duff states that the crew had arrived at New York on the 12th inst., and they would be leaving by S.S. Roseland for St. John's.

Youthful Criminals
Rounded Up

Three boys ranging from 11 to 14 years old were arrested Saturday night by Detectives Constables Lee and Walsh on charges ranging from highway robbery to petty theft. One of the charges against the youths is that they held up a 6 year old boy named Miller and took from his pockets the sum of $4.50. Their particular forte appears to be picking pockets and they are suspected of several affairs of this kind. One in particular being the lifting of a purse containing fifteen dollars. The lads visit the stores and auction rooms on Saturday nights and work amongst the crowd of shoppers. They will appear before the Magistrate this afternoon. The detectives have been on the watch for the lads for several weeks and did good work in rounding them up.

Severe Snow Storm
Reported North

PROSPERO SHELTERED AT CON-
CHE OVER NIGHT.

Capt. Field of the S. S. Prospero wired the Shipping Department Saturday night by stating that a heavy snow storm was met with while on the run from LeSele to Conche. The weather for a time was very thick, but the Captain managed to get his ship into the latter port, and remained there all Saturday night until the storm abated sufficient enough to continue the run to Quirpon on the following morning. The Prospero is now returning south, having left Conche at 10.30 yesterday morning.

Supreme Court.

BEFORE FULL BENCH.

King vs. Anthony Hawes.

On motion of H. A. Winter the trial is set for January 22nd, 1924, before a special jury, double panel is to be summoned. The court through the Chief Justice assigned P. A. Parsons, Solicitor, to assist the prisoner in the preparation and conduct of his defence with power to instruct a member of the bar who is willing to act for the defence under the conditions contained in the Poor Prisoners Act. Mr. C. E. Hunt will act as counsel in the case.

The Grand Jury was present and addressed by his Lordship the Chief Justice on a bill of indictment for incest against Joshua Rice. The jury retired and at 12.30 returned to court reporting a true bill. The prisoner will be arraigned this afternoon.

Wet Weather
Road Repairs

Those who have to travel over the Torbay Road are loud in complaint of the condition of certain sections, which by reason of being repaired with poor material, during a rainy season, is made impassable. In places vehicles sink in mud from 10 to 12 inches deep, and it is only with difficulty can fish and other produce be hauled to the city. Bad matters were made worse by making the repairs during the prevailing rainy weather.

Arrived With Prisoner

Constable Turk of Twillingate arrived in the city by last night's express, bringing a prisoner named Rice, his daughter and her friend girl, who are chief witnesses in a matter which went before the Grand Jury this forenoon. Constable Turk reports that at Twillingate fishermen are still doing well with trawls and when bait is to be had they take from 3 to 4 barrows of codfish per day.

The Bereavement of
His Excellency's Family

It will be learned with regret that His Excellency the Governor's family have met with a bereavement in the early demise of the infant son of his daughter, Mrs. Charles Butler of Hobart, Tasmania. That the marriage of his daughter, which took place just before his arrival in Newfoundland, should be so quickly followed by sorrow will evoke general sympathy in the community.

Obituary.

MRS. M. MOORE.

Many will regret to learn of the passing after a very brief illness of Mrs. M. Moore, of Torrington Cottage, Waterford Bridge Road. The deceased previous to her marriage was a Miss Harvey, the family being one of the oldest in the West end of the city. Her husband, who predeceased her, was a member of the Civil Service, being for a time leading waiter at the Customs, St. John's. Two sons of the late Mrs. Moore, the late Mr. Laurie, travelling salesman for the Stervin Williams Co., Edward, manager of the Knitting Mills, and one daughter, Mrs. Ross survive. The funeral takes place to-morrow afternoon.

NO CEREMONY MARKS THE MEETING OF PARLIAMENT.

LONDON, Nov. 12.

To-day's meeting of Parliament was merely a resumption of the session interrupted by the summer vacation and was not marked by any ceremony such as attends the opening of a new session when the King appears in State and the speech from the Throne is read. The members of the Commons to-day returned to occupy their old places.

DANGER!

Here, there and everywhere—in the home, at the store, in your office, night and day, danger always threatens, and we know not when, where or how the next injury will be met.

Eighty per cent. of claims paid are due to trivial causes—loose stair rod, carpet tack, lead pencil, child's toy, daily work, we are always subject to danger—just look around you and see how frequently serious accidents occur, and when ask yourself—

"Am I fully protected?"

Under our plan, a few cents per day will pay you for every loss.
