NOTE AND COMMENT

Glencoe Transcript: The old rat crept out of his hole, tried to break through the barriers that surrounded it, got severely grubbed, and sneaked back badly crippled and told the little rats what a great victory he had.

From the Bystander—An amiable German pastor has declared that it is the German soldier's duty to "shatter the butt-end of his rifle on the enemies skulls." Either the Germans are now using rifles of an inferior make which break easily, or we are a harder-headed race than we have hitherto suspected.

If at the close of the war, three or four hundred thousand soldiers are automatically thrown on the Canadian labor market, at a time, too, when the war industries for the same reason become extinct, and those men are without funds, and under the imperative necessity of securing employment at any price above what is required to provide a bare existence, the abnormal competition will bring down the wages of all classes already in civilian employment.

They have a Memorial Day in the United States for those who have given their lives at various times in defence of their country. This year there were various touching tributes paid, notably at Washington and New York. It has been suggested that after the war Canada should have such a day, and it seems not a bad idea for the encouragement of patriotism. Of more than 300,000 enlisted in the army of liberation nearly five thousand have already found graves in France and Flanders and Gallipoli. Their memories will be cherished in Canada. Should they be publicly honored in some such a way as the United States does those who have fallen in her defence?—Stratford Beacon.

Fault might well be found with the elaborate fashions of women's boots this season, which appear to have been designed to use up as much kid and other leather as possible, and so to force expense upon wearers. Ten dollars is really a ridiculous price for a pair of street boots in war times, and it would be a healthy sign if Canadian women refused to be cajoled into such extravagance when heavy sacrifices and money are being paid for their protection. Attempts in some quarters to substitute canvass or cloth for uppers in the interests of economy are being completely frustrated by the daring stylishness of the foreign designers.

Durham Chronicle:—Still prices are soaring! A few weeks ago we spoke of paying $6.00 a pound for ink we formerly bought for $3.00. That was a sudden jar, but not quite as bad as the one we got on Tuesday when a representative from the ink house was here and asked us $15 a pound for the same ink. Fifteen dollars a pound! We'll spell it out in full so as not to make a mistake about it. For a time the price of paper and other requirements remained fairly reasonable, but of late the advance has been a terror. Nearly all price lists have been withdrawn, and on sending in an order we have no idea what the price will be.

Quite a Contrast

$11 to $11.50 a hundred, live weight, for hogs, recalls the time when, in Upper Canada, the price of dressed hogs went as low as $2, or 10 shillings currency, as it then was, per hundred, says the Georgetown Herald. This was in 1835, the winter of the Mackenzie rebellion. The same winter the farmer who told the writer of that experience drew oats fifteen miles to Galt and sold them for a "York shilling" (twelve and a half cents) a bushel, both pork and oats being payable in store goods, at more, on the average, than double present prices. A very poor quality of red flannel sold at a dollar a yard, and a very inferior quality of tea brought the same price per pound. As a favor the farmer was allowed enough to pay his toll on the way home, having been given credit on the way out. Do any of us do well to grumble at present day prices or conditions.
