

and in addition to his ministrations, he also acted as a medical missionary at the direction and approval of his Bishop. Subsequently, he formed an entirely new station on the Assiniboine River. In 1855 he visited England, and during this period great interest was awakened towards Rupert's Land, both among Christian friends and on the part of the British Government. After attending the medical department at King's College* for a season, he returned to his station at Headingly, Red River Settlement. His course this time was through the Hudson's Straits, in the Prince of Wales, and thence from the sea-shore about 800 miles inland by small boats. He now set to work and raised new mission buildings, the numbers in this new settlement quickly increased, and his sphere of usefulness was greatly widened, and this station is still flourishing.

The rev. lecturer narrated many things on the diffi-

---

*The author's admission thereto was from the recommendation of the Rt. Rev. Bishop Anderson, and he now takes this opportunity of thankfully acknowledging the kindness of all, and the Medical and surgical Staff at this College and its Hospital, due especially to W. A. Guy Esq. M. B., F. R. C. P., &c., under whose medical care he was for the first year; and to Henry Smith Esq. F. R. C. S., and President of the London Medical Society, for his unabated kindness during the last three years in his very instructive class at the Hospital.