

able reduction in your claim. I will therefore be pleased if you will send me a full statement of your claims and at same time state what is the lowest sum you will accept as payment in full if paid in cash within ten days from receipt of your reply."

It may be that Mr. Miller, who is a notary public and an agent of various kinds and declares that he "transacts a general financial business," knows his own business best. But it would have been better for his reputation to have permitted Mr. Glauser to write his own letters to creditors, making so bare-faced a proposition. We are glad to learn from our correspondents that their claim against Glauser was paid in full, upon their sending a representative to Hanover and showing Mr. G. and Mr. Miller that they could not be driven into a reduction of account by stand-and-deliver letters.

BECAUSE they are warranted full count and as represented.
