

[1898.

a memorial of
at the public
on the evening
Westminster Hall.
able building to
so many years
held so large a
took place on
mourning, which
no witnessed it.
West door of the
multitude, and
representative of
, assembled to
was preceded by
the pall bearers
of York, Lord
and Sir William Cremorne. The
Westminster and
the more importance of Mr. Gladstone to the Holiest
of times past." Mrs.
at the conclusion of the service, bowed
before the illustrious remains, and then went to the grave, and with her hand on the coffin-lid, uttered a silent and