

CONTENTS.

251

Page
70
73
75
78
79
80
81
82
83
89
84
93
86
87
89
90
91
93
94
95
96
98
99
101
103
105
107
112
115
118
120
124
127
130
131
132
134
136
137
139
140

Sect. 10. Schemes of life often illusory	Page 141
11. The pleasures of virtuous sensibility	143
12. On the true honour of man	145
13. The influence of devotion on the happiness of life	146
14. The planetary and terrestrial worlds comparatively considered	149
15. On the power of custom, and the uses to which it may be applied	150
16. The pleasures resulting from a proper use of our faculties	152
17. Description of candour	152
18. On the imperfection of that happiness which rests solely on worldly pleasures	154
19. What are the real and solid enjoyments of human life	157
20. Scale of beings	158
21. Trust in the care of Providence recommended	161
22. Piety and gratitude enliven prosperity	162
23. Virtue, when deeply rooted, is not subject to the influence of fortune	164
24. The speech of Fabricius, a Roman ambassador, to king Pyrrhus	165
25. Character of James I. king of England	166
26. Charles V. emperor of Germany, resigns his dominions, and retires from the world	167
27. The same subject continued	170

PART II.

PIECES IN POETRY

CHAPTER I.

Select Sentences and Paragraphs.

Sect. 1. Short and easy sentences	Page 172
2. Verses in which the lines are of different length	174
3. Verses containing exclamations, interrogations, and parentheses	175
4. Verses in various forms	177
5. Verses in which sound corresponds to signification	179
6. Paragraphs of greater length	180

CHAPTER II.

Narrative Pieces.

Sect. 1. The bear and the bees	Page 182
2. The nightingale and the glow-worm	183
3. The trials of virtue	184
4. The youth and the philosopher	186
5. Discourse between Adam and Eve, retiring to rest	187
6. Religion and death	189

CHAPTER III.

Didactic Pieces.

Sect. 1. The vanity of wealth	Page 191
2. Nothing formed in vain	192
3. On pride	192
4. Cruelty to brutes censured	193
5. A paraphrase on the latter part of the 6th chapter of Matthew	194
6. The death of a good man a strong incentive to virtue	195
7. Reflections on a future state, from a review of winter	195
8. Adam's advice to Eve, to avoid temptation	196
9. On procrastination	197
10. That philosophy which stops at secondary causes, reproved	198
11. Indignant sentiments on national prejudices and hatred; and on slavery	199