EXCELLENT SIGHT WHEN BOAT CAME

A GREAT RECEPTION

Hamilton Proud of the Boys Who Have Answered

One of the most interesting night scenes ever witnessed on the Toronto harbor was the arrival back on Saturday evening of the crowded steamer Macassa with the 19th Battalion, second contingent from its regimental visit to Hamilton. Soon after the lights of the ships became visible thru the mist which overhung the bay faint sounds could be heard of soldiers singing. As the sounds became louder, the words of "Hail! Hail! the Gang's All Here!" told the story that the soldiers had returned in the best of spirits and that they had had a good time. The ship pulled up at the wharf to the east of the foot of Yonge street at 10 p.m., and the men stopped singing and sent up a hearty cheer as the boat glided into the slip.

Considering that over 800 men were on board the comparatively small steamer and about a dozen horses (the officers' mounts) the work of disembarking was carried thru very quickly. Owing to the water level being much lower than usual, a special gangway was attached to the upper deck and all the men had to leave by this, practically in single file. The disembarking was done in a very orderly and soldierly way, and inside of twenty minutes the whole battalion was drawn up on the big wharf in company form, including the big black bear, the mascot of the regiment. The bear showed good discipline, and came down the double turn gangway and onto the wharf without causing any trouble.

double turn gangway and onto the wharf without causing any trouble. Looked Somewhat Tired.

By 10.20 the whole battalion, with mounted officers, pipe band, buglers and signalers at the head, was ready for the march back to Exhibition Park camp. The men looked somewhat fired, as they were in heavy marching order and had put in a long day, since 5 a.m., but they all had a satisfied air about them and looked happy. All declared that they had enjoyed the trip immensely and that they had a good time in Hamilton, where they received a royal reception.

The march back to camp was by way of Yonge Front. Simcoe, King and Dufferin streets. It happened that the battalion was passing the Alexandra just as the theatre-goers were youring out, and they all lined up to see the unusual scene of a military parade at that time on King street. It was perhaps the farewell view of the troops before they leave for the front. They made a fine sight, because the unit was so complete, having all the sections of a regular infantry army.

On the strength of representations made by the chairman of the local association and others, the board of education has ordered an investigation into the charge that a contractor employed on a North Toronto school was paying less than the prevailing rates of wages.

First-Hand Information.

A number of workmen employed on the job, and present at the meeting, stated that they were paid at the rate of 20 cents an hour; some of them engaged in running the concrete mixer. The foreman employed on the job was also present and declared that the reason foreigners were employed in preference to Britishers or Canadians was that the latter were not always available. When requested by Ald. Ball to name the rate of wages paid he declined to do so. "No regard has been had by the contractor whether the men employed on the job were married men-supporting families, residents of North Toronto, foreigners or British.
