ATTORNEY DISAGREES WITH MAGISTRATE

Will Appeal Against Decision Given in Case of Philo Lamb, Hotelkeeper.

Yesterday in the police court Crown Attorney Forry disagreed with Magistrate Denton over his decision in the case of Philo Lamb charged with keeping liquor for sale. Inspector Burroughs, of the license department, swore that he visited Lamb's premises on Feb. 7, when Lamb obstructed him in his duty, snatched up a jar containing liquor, and poured it down the sink. The entire premises were searched, but no liquor was found. Magistrate Denton dismissed the case. The crown attorney will appeal.

In a second case a liquor inspector had taken samples of "stoe gin" from Lamb's Hotel, and upon analysis found it to contain 6.32 percent of alcohol. The penalty is $100, but he has not had a drop of liquor in his place since Sept. 16. The evidence of witnesses will be taken Friday.

Boleau was fined $200 and costs for having liquor on his premises contrary to the temperance act.

The other case was that of J. Thompson of Halleybury, who was fined $50 for selling to Montreal for whiskey and selling half of it to another man who lived in a shack with him in the northern country.

Following is today's list for the first divisional court: Woodhouse v. Ideal Stock and Poultry Co., re James, re O'Brien and Nepton, Nestor v. Nestor, Smith v. Board of Education of Campbellford, Baldwin v. O'Brien.

LAND SURVEYORS MEET; ANNUAL CONVENTION

Appoint Committee to Discuss Finances and Hear Addresses.

Discussion of the financial condition of the organization and the appointment of a committee to recommend means of overcoming the deficit in the treasury featured the first session of the twenty-fifth annual convention of the Association of Ontario Land Surveyors in the lecture room of the Engineers' Club, 90 West King street, yesterday afternoon. The convention lasts for three days, and meetings will be held every morning, afternoon and night.

The association is at present not self-sustaining because it is carrying 35 members who are in military service; the cost of publication of the reports, which are distributed in the United States and Canada, has been increased and other expenses have advanced. The deficit amounts to several hundred dollars. It was suggested that the annual fee be raised from $4 to $5, to which no objection was offered. It was also recommended that the rate of admission to the association thru examination be increased. The candidate is now charged $10 when he applies and $25 after he succeeds in passing the examination. The committee appointed to consider these possibilities and other ideas looking to a solution of the problem consists of Vice-President James J. McKay, Secretary-treasurer L. V. Rorke and J. Doble. Active members number 262.

In the absence of President C. J. Murphy, Mr. McKay presided. The president's address was read by Mr. Rorke, and in the following business meeting the reports of the secretary, treasurer, committee on publication, committee on topographical survey and legislation were considered. John Dalton read a paper written by J. T. Rennie, D.T.S., on "A Few Thoughts on Geodesy."
